Daughter Hears Shot Fired in Thompson Avenue Home.

Bullet Misses Heart.

Arising at her usual time, Mrs. Evans, partially dressed, went to the dining room of the house. Her husband, who was not working today, was not aroused from his sleep. In the dining room Mrs. Evans dissolved bichloride of mercury tablets in a glass of water and swallowed the contents.

She then went to her bed room, secured a 32-caliber revolver from a dresser drawer, walked to the bath room, closed the door and then, pressing the muzzle of the revolver to her left breast, pulled the trigger. The bullet entered just below her heart.

Two Autos Wrecked; Three Persons Are Reported Injured

Two cars were wrecked and three persons injured last night in two accidents which followed the first snow of the winter.

A large touring car, owned by Thomas Morgan, of near Faulkner's stop on the Y. & O., overturned on a by-road connecting with the Lincoln highway, about a mile north of Stop 55, about 9 o'clock. Morgan, at the wheel of the car, is said to have been blinded by the driving snow. Eight passengers in the car, including a 12-day-old baby, escaped unhurt. The automobile was brought to East Liverpool by the McElravy Brothers' wreck car.

Another automobile, owned by Floyd Zornes, 719 Jefferson street, was wrecked on the Lisbon-Salem road, Friday night when it skidded and overturned in a ditch. Zornes, a woman and a child are reported to have been injured, none of them seriously.

Dr. Biederwolf Gives Pertinent Advice to Converts as Well as Those Who Reconsecrated Themselves to God's Work.

BY T. T. JONES

New converts and those who had during the now-closing revival reconsecrated themselves to God's service were the recipients of pertinent admonitions and advice by Dr. Biederwolf, evangelist, at the Second and Washington streets tabernacle on Friday night. Concluding with a compelling resume of the gospel virtues—many others, accepting his invitation, trod the blazed trail and allied themselves with those whom he had been addressing.

What approximated a memorial service to the late W. L. Thompson, hymn writer and business man, one who for his countless virtues and outstanding abilities had brought national fame to East Liverpool, formed the preliminary services of the meeting.

With becoming gesture in reference to his memory a good-sized delegation of residents of Maplewood, his former friends and neighbors many of them, came to the auditorium in a body and listened with the remainder of the big audience to the singing of the songs that he had in his life here composed.

These, the big choir, directed by William McEwan, sang one after the other as the musical director at intervals explained the tune, manner and conditions under which they had been written.

"His songs I have sung for years and all over the world" asserted McEwan as he arose to give his solo number "The Sinner And the Song." This was odubtless inspired by experiences right here in East Liverpool. I never thought the time would come when I should be permitted to again sing it in the author's home town."

Mr. McEwan Sings

Knowing the hymn so well from its frequent use, Mr. McEwan gave it special interpretation, utilizing gestures as he went along as does the orator and dramatist. An added touch to the piece's inherent strength and beauty was the soft combination at intervals in it of that other famed hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," by a quartette consisting of Lydia Farrar, Mrs. Elizabeth Baker and Meessers Oliver Johnson and Norman Pilgrim. The combined effect was decidedly appealing, eliciting generous applause at its conclusion.

Fitting admirably in the tribute given was an illuminating and eulogizing address by Dr. William H. Clark, the pastor of Immanuel Presby-

America Is Clean Nation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The United States produced approximately $300,000 000 worth of soap in 1924.

This smashes previous records and indicates that America is not only the cleanest nation in the world, but furnishes a bigger per cent of cleaning material than any other country.

Department of commerce figures today showed that the 1923 soap production of about $275,000,000 was an increase of 15 per cent.

CITY MAY USE DETECTIVES TO RUN DOWN DRY LAW OFFENDERS

Action on Ordinance Deferred at Brokaw's Suggestion.

PAY $10 PER

Proposed Legislation is Discussed at Council Meeting.

An emergency ordinance, authorizing the safety director to employ detectives to enforce the prohibition statutes, was considered by council last night, but, at the suggestion of Solicitor Harry Brokaw, action was deferred until a special meeting which has been called for next Tuesday evening.

By a ruling of a state examiner, Solicitor Brokaw contends that the ten per cent fund, made available from fines paid by liquor violators, cannot be used in the enforcement of the dry laws unless council authorizes the appointment of detectives or special police. The attorney-general, it is claimed, recently announced a ruling on this point, making legislation, appointing detectives, necessary before any part of such fines may be expended in the campaign against bootleggers.

Pending a conference with Mayor Brown and Safety Director Anderson, the number of detectives to be employed under the provisions of the ordinance will not be fixed. A commission of $10 will be paid for each conviction. The ordinance is declared to be an emergency measure because "numerous violations of the city prohibition laws are taking place within the limits of the city."

Will Borrow $70,000.

When the title of the ordinance was read, Cunciliman Rowe moved that it be taken up for consideration. His motion, however, lacked a second. The solicitor advised that no action be taken until the next meeting.

Councilman Kerr argued that the passage of the measure would eliminate the need of the special police, as provided by an ordinance recently

METSCH REFRACTORIES CO. OFFICE AND PLANT ARE LOOTED; $80 STOLEN

Youthful Gang, Said to be Amateurs, Jimmy Door to Enter, Then Ransack Machine Shop of Electric Porcelain Plant for Tools to Use in Early Morning Robbery.

TWO DOORS OF STRONGBOX BATTERED OPEN AS IN EAST LIVERPOOL JOBS

Robbers, Police Believe, Thought Saturday Was Pay Day and That Payroll for 50 Employes Would be in Safe — Two Old Watches and Checks are Not Taken.

Yeggs, believed by police to be amateurs, forced their way into the office of the Metsch Refractories company, Third street, Newell, early today, battered open the outer and inner doors of the safe, ransacked the office and escaped with approximately $80 in money.

Four desks in the office were forced open, letter files rifled and even the waste paper basket emptied by the robbers in their search for money.

Cassius M. Metsch, manager of the company, announced the offer of a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty persons.

The robbers are believed to have gained an entrance by jimmying a window on the west side of the building. In the machine shop they found hammers, chisels and other tools which were used in battering open the doors of the safe. How they entered the machine shop, Mr. Metsch was unable to explain, as this door was locked.

Jimmy Lock In Door.

The lock in the door leading from the factory into the office was jimmied. The door of the safe was lying upon the floor, around it being scattered the tools used by the yeggs in their work. In the safe was about $80 in cash, which the robbers took. Two old watches in another compartment and checks were not taken.

Every desk in the office was forced open, a thorough search being made by the thieves. Contents of letter files were scattered about the floor.

Mr. Metsch discovered the robbery when he went to the plant at 7 o'clock this morning. Chief of Police McDermott of East Liverpool, was called to investigate.

According to the police chief, the job bears a striking resemblance to the robbery at the Woodbine steam laundry, Fourth street, last Friday night, when the safe door was also battered open.

Three or four persons are believed to have been connected with the robbery. It is thought that an outlook was also posted to give the alarm in the event any one approached.

Although the plant was closed about 5 o'clock last night police believe the robbery was committed after midnight. The plant is situated in Third street, near Harrison street. Several residences are within 200 or 300 feet of the factory.

Police think the yeggs selected Friday night for the robbery because they believed that the Saturday payroll for the company's 50 employes would be locked in the safe. No night watchman is employed at the plant.

Mr. Metsch announced today that hereafter all employes would be paid by check.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Miss Marie Virginia Edmonds, 23, Los Angeles society girl, lost her life today when fire destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Sheehan, Jr., where she was a guest.

She attended Mount Vernon seminary in Washington, D. C., and later was a student at Miss Semple's girl school in New York City.

INSANITY WILL BE WOLFE PLEA

Alleged Slayer of Woman Faces Jury on Monday.

William A. Wolfe, East End clay miner, will offer a defense of insanity for his alleged slaying of Mrs. Flora Dearth, Mulberry street restaurant owner, last October 3, when his trial is called in common pleas court, Lisbon, Monday morning.

Attorneys Frank Grosshans, of East Liverpool, and W. W. Beck of Lisbon, have filed with Judge James G. Moore a physician's statement that Wolfe is insane. A jury will be empanelled at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning to determine the question. Judge Carl H. Smith, of Steubenville, will preside.

Wolfe was indicted for second degree murder at a special session of the grand jury held early this month. He pleaded not guilty when he was arraigned.

Approximately 20 witnesses, the majority of them from East End, where Wolfe resided, have been subpoenaed to testify at the sanity hearing, the summons being served today by Deputy Sheriff George Wright.

Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Hanley would make no statement today when advised of Wolfe's defense. A three fourths' verdict will be necessary to determine Wolfe's mental condition.

Should the prisoner be declared insane, he will be committed to the state hospital for the criminal insane at Lima.

Wolfe is alleged to have shot and killed Mrs. Dearth during a quarrel. He then attempted suicide by shooting himself in the right jaw. The bullet destroyed the optic nerve of his left eye. After a month's treatment at the City hospital he was transferred to jail where he has been held in default of a $10,000 bond.

GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING ASSAILS WAR UNPREPAREDNESS; DEMANDS MORE MEN, AIRPLANES AND AMMUNITION FOR UNCLE SAM'S ARMY

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. — Frank, unvarnished criticism of the unprepared condition of the United States in the crisis of the World War, and recommendations of changes, improvements and expansion which he deems necessary for the adequate defense of the country are brought out forcibly in the final report of General John J. Pershing as Chief of Staff of the Army.

General Pershing's report, made public by the War Department today, officially ends his service with the United States Army, and contains the last words the former commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary forces in France, has to say on the subjects nearest and dearest to his heart, as well as the accurate summing up of what the army has been, is, and should be by the greatest living military chieftain.

Concisely, General Pershing reports:

Army's Backbone

1. The infantry is still the backbone of the army and should be strengthened and adequately supported; but the air service has grown to be one of the most necessary arms of the service, and the most vital need at present is for its increase by gradual development.

2. The army should be increased to 150,000 men and 13,000 officers, and our overseas garrisons should be increased to their prescribed strength.

3. Universal aproval of the people toward strengthening national defense was given in the defense test; and the work planned in building up a reserve army strength, through civilian training, should be carried on vigorously.

4 We should build up a reserve supply of ammunition and airplanes, so that we shall never again be placed in the unprepared and humiliating position we were in in the World war, when we were forced to use ammunition and planes manufactured in other countries.

5. Reserve stocks of all supplies needed in warfare should be built up instead of continuing along our present "hand-to-mouth" policy.

More Coast Defense.

6. Our coast defenses should be strengthened, so that in case of emergency we could really protect our coast cities of great wealth and population.

7. At least 10 per cent of the captains in the Army should be promoted by selection each year in order to retain the present high morale of the Army and adequately reward officers of ability and worth.

8. Chiefs of combatanat branches of the Army should be made permanent majors-general, instead of having the rank go with the duties as at present, in order to give greater stability to an extremely important part of Army work.

9. Majors-General Hunter Liggett, Robert L. Bullard, Joseph T. Dickman, Charles P. Summerall, John L. Hines, James G. Harbord, and James W. McAndrew (deceased) should be promoted to be lieutenants-general.

"Armies must still fight our battles, and, to win, must overcome the opposing forces." General Pershing asserts. "The infantry still remains the backbone of the attack, and the role of the other arms is to help it reach the enemy. All must work in co-operation to that end. The idea that the principles of warfare have changed and that armed contests will be settled in any other way have nothing substantial in our experience to warrant serious consideration.

"As an important ausiliary army, the Air Service should be available for independent use in mass, or otherwise, wherever necessary. Our Air Service should be developed to every reasonable extent, both as to personnel and material; and it is essentially necessary that aircraft production be established and maintained on such a basis as to be easily expanded in time of emergency."

General Pershing also recommends that a larger proportion of non-commissioned officers be trained as air pilots and that National Guard and Reserve officers should be encouraged to take training in aviation.

On the question of the use of aircraft in the World War, General Pershing minces no words. Explaining his assertion that, while it is a most important arm of the service, main dependence must still be placed on the infantry, he writes.

"Our experience in the World War as to airplane production and the training of personnel should be continuously borne in mind. Early in 1917, it will be recalled, an appropriation of $600,000,000 was hastily made with what seemed to be an effort to overcome previous inexcusable neglect to make provision even for experimental investigation, to say nothing of preparation for the manufacture of airplanes. The voice of criticism for previous inaction was apparently stilled, for the time being, by the loudly hearalded purpose to send 50,000 airplanes to the Western front without delay—a declaration that later brought many an embarrassing moment to those of us abroad who knew how baseless and boastful such claims were. It is a matter of record that even the type of plane to be put into production was not decided upon until several months after we entered the war, and that no American plane was flown in battle until August, 1918, and only some 600 planes had been sent to the front before the armistice."

The Air Service, General Pershing reports, has an important function to perform in securing information through conservation and in directing artillery fire; but a great deal of training is necessary in order to secure the proper co-operation. Improvements in anti-aircraft artillery seem to be keeping pace with aircraft improvement, in General Pershing's opinion, and he does not forsee that airplanes can take the place of seacoast or battleship protection.

Damage Negligible.

Damage done by aircraft, either by the Allies or the enemy, was almost negligible, General Pershing reports, and until a much greater deadliness can be assured it cannot be said we are in a position to abandon past experience in warfare. General Pershing also decries the effectiveness of poison gas. The use of gas, he reports, although horrible enough, was

Yeggs, believed by police to be amateurs, forced their way into the office of the Metsch Refractories company, Third street, Newell, early today, battered open the outer and inner doors of the safe, ransacked the office and escaped with approximately $80 in money.

Four desks in the office were forced open, letter files rifled and even the waste paper basket emptied by the robbers in their search for money.

Cassius M. Metsch, manager of the company, announced the offer of a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty persons.

The robbers are believed to have gained an entrance by jimmying a window on the west side of the building. In the machine shop they found hammers, chisels and other tools which were used in battering open the doors of the safe. How they entered the machine shop, Mr. Metsch was unable to explain, as this door was locked.

Jimmy Lock in Door.

The lock in the door leading from the factory into the office was jimmied. The door of the safe was lying upon the floor, around it being scattered the tools used by the yeggs in their work. In the safe was about $80 in cash, which the robbers took. Two old watches in another compartment and checks were not taken.

Every desk in the office was forced open, a thorough search being made by the thieves. Contents of letter files were scattered about the floor.

Mr. Metsch discovered the robbery when he went to the plant at 7 o'clock this morning. Chief of Police McDermott of East Liverpool, was called to investigate.

According to the police chief, the job bears a striking resemblance to the robbery at the Woodbine steam laundry, Fourth street, last Friday night, when the safe door was also battered open.

Three or four persons are believed to have been connected with the robbery. It is thought that an outlook was also posted to give the alarm in the event any one approached.

Although the plant was closed about 5 o'clock last night police believe the robbery was committed after midnight. The plant is situated in Third street, near Harrison street. Several residences are within 200 or 300 feet of the factory.

Police think the yeggs selected Friday night for the robbery because they believed that the Saturday payroll for the company's 50 employes would be locked in the safe. No night watchman is employed at the plant.

Mr. Metsch announced today that hereafter all employes would be paid by check.

INSANITY WILL BE WOLFE PLEA

Alleged Slayer of Woman Faces Jury on Monday.

William A. Wolfe, East End clay miner, will offer a defense of insanity for his alleged slaying of Mrs. Flora Dearth, Mulberry street restaurant owner, last October 3, when his trial is called in common pleas court, Lisbon, Monday morning.

Attorneys Frank Grosshans, of East Liverpool, and W. W. Beck of Lisbon, have filed with Judge James G. Moore a physician's statement that Wolfe is insane. A jury will be empanelled at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning to determine the question. Judge Carl H. Smith, of Steubenville, will preside.

Wolfe was indicted for second degree murder at a special session of the grand jury held early this month. He pleaded not guilty when he was arraigned.

Approximately 20 witnesses, the majority of them from East End, where Wolfe resided, have been subpoenaed to testify at the sanity hearing, the summons being served today by Deputy Sheriff George Wright.

Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Hanley would make no statement today when advised of Wolfe's defense. A three fourths' verdict will be necessary to determine Wolfe's mental condition.

Should the prisoner be declared insane, he will be committed to the state hospital for the criminal insane at Lima.

Wolfe is alleged to have shot and killed Mrs. Dearth during a quarrel. He then attempted suicide by shooting himself in the right jaw. The bullet destroyed the optic nerve of his left eye. After a month's treatment at the City hospital he was transferred to jail where he has been held in default of a $10,000 bond.

GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING ASSAILS WAR UNPREPAREDNESS; DEMANDS MORE MEN, AIRPLANES AND AMMUNITION FOR UNCLE SAM'S ARMY

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. — Frank, unvarnished criticism of the unprepared condition of the United States in the crisis of the World War, and recommendations of changes, improvements and expansion which he deems necessary for the adequate defense of the country are brought out forcibly in the final report of General John J. Pershing as Chief of Staff of the Army.

General Pershing's report, made public by the War Department today, officially ends his service with the United States Army, and contains the last words the former commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary forces in France, has to say on the subjects nearest and dearest to his heart, as well as the accurate summing up of what the army has been, is, and should be by the greatest living military chieftain.

Concisely, General Pershing reports:

Army's Backbone

1. The infantry is still the backbone of the army and should be strengthened and adequately supported; but the air service has grown to be one of the most necessary arms of the service, and the most vital need at present is for its increase by gradual development.

2. The army should be increased to 150,000 men and 13,000 officers, and our overseas garrisons should be increased to their prescribed strength.

3. Universal aproval of the people toward strengthening national defense was given in the defense test; and the work planned in building up a reserve army strength, through civilian training, should be carried on vigorously.

4 We should build up a reserve supply of ammunition and airplanes, so that we shall never again be placed in the unprepared and humiliating position we were in in the World war, when we were forced to use ammunition and planes manufactured in other countries.

5. Reserve stocks of all supplies needed in warfare should be built up instead of continuing along our present "hand-to-mouth" policy.

More Coast Defense.

6. Our coast defenses should be strengthened, so that in case of emergency we could really protect our coast cities of great wealth and population.

7. At least 10 per cent of the captains in the Army should be promoted by selection each year in order to retain the present high morale of the Army and adequately reward officers of ability and worth.

8. Chiefs of combatanat branches of the Army should be made permanent majors-general, instead of having the rank go with the duties as at present, in order to give greater stability to an extremely important part of Army work.

9. Majors-General Hunter Liggett, Robert L. Bullard, Joseph T. Dickman, Charles P. Mummerall, John L. Hines, James G. Harbord, and James W. McAndrew (deceased) should be promoted to be lieutenants-general.

"Armies must still fight our battles, and, to win, must overcome the opposing forces." General Pershing asserts. "The infantry still remains the backbone of the attack, and the role of the other arms is to help it reach the enemy. All must work in co-operation to that end. The idea that the principles of warfare have changed and that armed contests will be settled in any other way have nothing substantial in our experience to warrant serious consideration.

"As an important ausiliary army, the Air Service should be available for independent use in mass, or otherwise, wherever necessary. Our Air Service should be developed to every reasonable extent, both as to personnel and material; and it is essentially necessary that aircraft production be established and maintained on such a basis as to be easily expanded in time of emergency."

General Pershing also recommends that a larger proportion of non-commissioned officers be trained as air pilots and that National Guard and Reserve officers should be encouraged to take training in aviation.

On the question of the use of aircraft in the World War, General Pershing minces no words. Explaining his assertion that, while it is a most important arm of the service, main dependence must still be placed on the infantry, he writes.

"Our experience in the World War as to airplane production and the training of personnel should be continuously borne in mind. Early in 1917, it will be recalled, an appropriation of $600,000,000 was hastily made with what seemed to be an effort to overcome previous inexcusable neglect to make provision even for experimental investigation, to say nothing of preparation for the manufacture of airplanes. The voice of criticism for previous inaction was apparently stilled, for the time being, by the loudly heralded purpose to send 50,000 airplanes to the Western front without delay—a declaration that later brought many an embarrassing moment to those of us abroad who knew how baseless and boastful such claims were. It is a matter of record that even the type of plane to be put into production was not decided upon until several months after we entered the war, and that no American plane was flown in battle until August, 1918, and only some 600 planes had been sent to the front before the armistice."

The Air Service, General Pershing reports, has an important function to perform in securing information through conservation and in directing artillery fire; but a great deal of training is necessary in order to secure the proper co-operation. Improvements in anti-aircraft artillery seem to be keeping pace with aircraft improvement, in General Pershing's opinion, and he does not forsee that airplanes can take the place of seacoast or battleship protection.

Damage Negligible.

Damage done by aircraft, either by the Allies or the enemy, was almost negligible, General Pershing reports, and until a much greater deadliness can be assured it cannot be said we are in a position to abandon past experience in warfare. General Pershing also decries the effectiveness of poison gas. The use of gas, he reports, although horrible enough, was

Daughter Hears Shot Fired in Thompson Avenue Home.

Her mind believed to have been unbalanced by worry over ill health, Mrs. Emma Evans, aged about 50, wife of John M. Evans, potter, is in a serious condition at the City hospital, as a result of firing a .32-calibre revolver bullet into her left breast after taking a quantity of bichloride of mercury at her home, 169 Thompson avenue, at 6 o'clock this morning.

Bullet Misses Heart.

Arising at her usual time, Mrs. Evans, partially dressed, went to the dining room of the house. Her husband, who was not working today, was not aroused from his sleep. In the dining room Mrs. Evans dissolved bichloride of mercury tablets in a glass of water and swallowed the contents.

She then went to her bed room, secured a 32-caliber revolver from a dresser drawer, walked to the bath room, closed the door and then, pressing the muzzle of the revolver to her left breast, pulled the trigger. The bullet entered just below her heart.

Songs of Late W. L. Thompson Are Sung At Evangelistic Services In Tabernacle

Dr. Biederwolf Gives Pertinent Advice to Converts as Well as Those Who Reconsecrated Themselves to God's Work.

BY T. T. JONES

New converts and those who had during the now-closing revival reconsecrated themselves to God's service were the recipients of pertinent admonitions and advice by Dr. Biederwolf, evangelist, at the Second and Washington streets tabernacle on Friday night. Concluding with a compelling resume of the gospel virtues — many others, accepting his invitation, trod the blazed trail and allied themselves with those whom he had been addressing.

What approximated a memorial service to the late W. L. Thompson, hymn writer and business man, one who for his countless virtues and outstanding abilities had brought national fame to East Liverpool, formed the preliminary services of the meeting.

With becoming gesture in reference to his memory a good-sized delegation of residents of Maplewood, his former friends and neighbors many of them, came to the auditorium in a body and listened with the remainder of the big audience to the singing of the songs that he had in his life here composed.

These, the big choir, directed by William McEwan, sang one after the other as the musical director at intervals explained the tune, manner and conditions under which they had been written.

"His songs I have sung for years and all over the world" asserted McEwan as he arose to give his solo number "The Sinner And the Song." This was odubtless inspired by experiences right here in East Liverpool. I never thought the time would come when I should be permitted to again sing it in the author's home town."

Mr. McEwan Sings

Knowing the hymn so well from its frequent use, Mr. McEwan gave it special interpretation, utilizing gestures as he went along as does the orator and dramatist. An added touch to the piece's inherent strength and beauty was the soft combination at intervals in it of that other famed hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," by a quartette consisting of Lydia Farrar, Mrs. Elizabeth Baker and Meessers Oliver Johnson and Norman Pilgrim. The combined effect was decidedly appealing, eliciting generous applause at its conclusion.

Fitting admirably in the tribute given was an illuminating and eulogizing address by Dr. William H. Clark, the pastor of Immanuel Presby-

Two Autos Wrecked; Three Persons Are Reported Injured

Two cars were wrecked and three persons injured last night in two accidents which followed the first snow of the winter.

A large touring car, owned by Thomas Morgan, of near Faulkner's stop on the Y. & O., overturned on a by-road connecting with the Lincoln highway, about a mile north of Stop 55, about 9 o'clock. Morgan, at the wheel of the car, is said to have been blinded by the driving snow. Eight passengers in the car, including a 12-day-old baby, escaped unhurt. The automobile was brought to East Liverpool by the McElravy Brothers' wreck car.

Another automobile, owned by Floyd Zornes, 719 Jefferson street, was wrecked on the Lisbon-Salem road, Friday night when it skidded and overturned in a ditch. Zornes, a woman and a child are reported to have been injured, none of them seriously.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The United States produced approximately $300,000,000 worth of soap in 1924.

Department of commerce figures today showed that the 1923 soap production of about $275,000,000 was an increase of 15 per cent.

CITY MAY USE DETECTIVES TO RUN DOWN DRY LAW OFFENDERS

Action on Ordinance Deferred at Brokaw's Suggestion.

PAY $10 PER

Proposed Legislation is Discussed at Council Meeting.

An emergency ordinance, authorizing the safety director to employ detectives to enforce the prohibition statutes, was considered by council last night, but, at the suggestion of Solicitor Harry Brokaw, action was deferred until a special meeting which has been called for next Tuesday evening.

By a ruling of a state examiner, Solicitor Brokaw contends that the ten per cent fund, made available from fines paid by liquor violators, cannot be used in the enforcement of the dry laws unless council authorizes the appointment of detectives or special police. The attorney-general, it is claimed, recently announced a ruling on this point, making legislation, appointing detectives, necessary before any part of such fines may be expended in the campaign against bootleggers.

Pending a conference with Mayor Brown and Safety Director Anderson, the number of detectives to be employed under the provisions of the ordinance will not be fixed. A commission of $10 will be paid for each conviction. The ordinance is declared to be an emergency measure because "numerous violations of the city prohibition laws are taking place within the limits of the city."

Will Borrow $70,000.

When the title of the ordinance was read, Councilman Rowe moved that it be taken up for consideration. His motion, however, lacked a second. The solicitor advised that no action be taken until the next meeting.

Councilman Kerr argued that the passage of the measure would eliminate the need of the special police, as provided by an ordinance recently

BRITONS KILL 13 SUDANESE

Two British Officers Slain and Eight Soldiers Wounded.

KHARTUM, Egypt, Nov. 29.—The British artillery today razed the house where the Egyptian army insurgents took refuge and killed 13 Sudanese soldiers. The remainder surrendered.

CAIRO, Nov. 29.—Two British officers were killed and eight soldiers wounded in the operation against the Sudanese mutineers, it was learned today. The situation is under control, according to advices from Khartoum.

Communication wiht Khartoum was on a halting and difficult schedule today through slashing of the telegraph wires, but latest reports stated that serious street fighting had been going on. The mutinous Sudanese who killed three physicians and destroyed the Khartoum hospital yesterday are surrounded by British troops.

Warnings have been issued to the Sudanese troops tha tthe penalty for mutiny will be death and that executions will be ordered of members of the organization in which the mutiny originates.

The Suedaneese have but little ammunition and the British control the machine guns and ammunition stores, which are under heavy guard.

It is reported that an Italian attorney was killed during yesterday's attack.

Though the meager advices did not state, it is believed probable that martial law has been declared in Khartoum.

River boats entering the Sudan have cancelled their schedules and the only consistent communication has been via wireless.

County Automobile Club Opposes Any Ohio Gasoline Tax

Holding that the automobile owner is already overtaxed, the board of directors of the Columbiana County Motor club, at a meeting held in Lisbon last night, went on record as being opposed to any form of gasoline tax in Ohio, unless such a tax goes direct to the state highway department. The club also opposed a two-cent "gas" tax with a reduction in the license fee to $3 with graduated tax on trucks and busses.

State highway traffic patrol was also opposed. The club approved legislation requiring all automobile drivers to be licensed, compulsory automobile liability insurance, requiring applications for licenses to be accompanied by bill of state, requiring traffic officers to be uniformed, curbing jurisdiction of so-called "kangaroo courts" and for the restoration of the half-mill levy for highway construction.

Election of directors will take place early in January.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Under the leadership of the steel, motor and industrial stocks, the main body of speculative stocks swung into higher price levels in the short session of the stock market today. Price movements were decidedly mixed in the railroad and oil stocks, some stocks going forward to higher prices, while others declined under fairly heavily selling pressure.

United States steel and Studebaker continued at the head respectively of the steel and motor stocks, though the independent steels in the former group and General Motors, Willys-Overland Allied Motor Accessory stocks gave new exhibitions of strength.

The rise in the reserve ratio of the New York Federal Reserve bank from 76.5 per cent a week ago to 78.2 afforded an evidence of the strong position of the money market and confirmed impressions in Wall street that Friday's advance in call money rates to 4 per cent reflected nothing more han preparation for month-end financing. The week end business reviews of the principal mercantile agencies were perhaps the most favorable with respect to present performances and optimistic in their outlooks.

Expansion of the operations of Bethlehem, Repolgle, Youngstown and other important steel manufacturers was vouched for by the officials of the various companies.

Family Feud Ends In Three Deaths And One Wounding

MINTURN, Colo., Nov. 29—A family feud of several months' standing ended here today with the death of three persons and the slight wounding of a fourth, when John Cordova shot and killed Petrolio Parvis, a rancher, and Parvis' stepdaughter, Lotrila Paltinco, 16-years-old, then, after wounding the girl's stepmother, fired a bullet into his own brain.

According to City Marshall De Long, Cordova went to the cabin and renewed a quarrel which started six months ago when Cordova was forcibly ejected from the Parvis home because the latter objected to Cordova's attention to the stepdaughter.

General Pershing

masks greatly reduced the number of casualties.

"Moreover," General Pershing reports, "I am not ready to concede that such inhuman destruction of non-combatants — through the wholesale wiping out of populations by gas—would be undertaken by any civilized nation, even though possible."

On general questions of national defense, General Pershing asserts the United States must make no further reductions in the army; but, on the other hand, must restore decreases made since 1921.

"We are down to rock-bottom," General Pershing reports, "and no further cuts can be made without endangering the whole scheme. Efficiency and economy cannot be achieved under such fluctuation in strength. Economic plans are fruitless without stabilization in the basic factors of numbers and organization."

More Ammunition.

On the question of ammunition and other war supplies, General Pershing reports:

"It goes without saying that arms and ammunition are vital to our armies, but never yet in my time has any forethought been given to this subject. Our experience in the World War was most humiliating. Not a single round of artillery ammunition of our own manufacture was fired by us up to the armistice, except from the 4.7s and the five naval guns on railway mounts; and the quantity was negligible as compared with the millions of rounds used. To put production of ammunition on a large quantity basis requires both time and previous preparation. During the period after an emergency arises, while factories are expanding, there must be a certain supply of all necessary kinds on hand, or we should be helpless. We should begin to build up a reserve supply and keep our factories in a reasonable state of readiness for expansion."

Improved coast defences are also necessary, General Pershing reports.

"We know that fleets cannot successfully attack coast defences where there is anything like a parity of armament," he asserts, "and to be safe the wise thing would be to outrange them. Modern guns, with improved fire control, should be installed to protect our coast cities, and every consideration should be given to the possibilities of long-range railway artillery."

General Pershing also recommends strongly that the present national defense policy be maintained and expanded, asserting that it has been an unqualified success.

Woman Drinks Poison

report of the gun, but believing it was some article falling from a shelf, paid no attention to the sound. A minute or two later Mrs. Evans walked into the bedroom occupied by Mrs. Orr and her husband, and told them that she had shot herself. Then, weakened from the loss of blood, she fell to the floor.

The wounded woman was carried to a bed and efforts were made to call a physician from a neighbor's telephone. The Miller ambulance was called and the victim was rushed to the city hospital, where Dr. C. H. Bailey attended her.

"My family is not responsible for this," Mrs. Evans told friends at the hospital. "I just couldn't stand the way people were talking about me," was her reply to questions. She was conscious after being taken to the hospital, but was very weak from the loss of blood.

Mrs. Evans is said to have been in failing health for several weeks and at times seemed melancholy. Just before retiring last evening she is said to have remarked that "people were talking about me." Members of the family were unable to explain the remark, beneving that it was an hallucination.

Find Poison Tablets

The woman told hospital attendants that she took but two of the bichloride of mercury tablets. The bottle containing the poison, which originally held 25 tablets, contained but 11 when found this morning.

Chief of Police McDermott made an investigation of the case this morning. He took charge of the revolver which the woman had used in the attempt to take her life.

Hospital authorities at 11 o'clock this morning stated that Mrs. Evans was in a serious condition.

adopted. There was no lengthy discussion of the proposed legislation, however, when it was decided that it would not be considered until the next session.

An ordinance authorizing the city to borrow $70,000 to pay the property holders' share in the improvement of Franklin, Riverview, Jefferson, Cadmus, Monroe and West Eighth streets,, McKinnon avenue and Rural lane in anticipation of the collection of special assessments was placed on first reading. Because of the absence of Councilmen Eardley and Hayes, it was impossible to suspend the rules and enact the ordinance on second and third readings.

City Engineer George was instructed to prepare estimates on the cost of building a storm sewer over a run which runs parallel with Pennsylvania and Harker avenues, East End. A delegation of the property holders asked for this improvement.

Council ordered the service director to send a bill to William Tracy of Minerva street for constructing a sidewalk in front of his property. Tracy appeared at the meeting and told council he had awarded the contract for his walk, but before the contractors he had engaged started work, the city put in the walk at his expense. He expressed the desire to pay for the improvement at once.

Service Director Ellis reported that the street lighting fund for the remainder of the year was exhausted, but his communication was filed. He also reported that negotiations were under way with the officials of the Y. & O. railroad to provide a roadway to Dresden avenue for residents in the vicinity of Claiborne avenue.

The service director asked council's aid relative to a complaint made by the United States engineers' office at Pittsburgh, that waste from a pottery is being emptied near the wharfboat landing from a sewer leading into the Ohio river at the foot of Broadway. It is said that this sewer comes down Apple alley and formerly led far out into the river. When the wharfboat landing was dredged, it is claimed, this sewer was torn up, so that now refuse is emptied close to the shore. Council, with the city engineer and service director, will view the place in an effort to remedy the situation.

Depository Commission Reports.

The depository commission reported $438.53 in local banks for the month of October. The service director also reported rentals on city property amounting to $535 as having been collected since September 10.

Council N. P. Kerr, reporting for the street committee, urged improvement of Myrtle avenue, Elizabeth, Sixth, West Eighth, Fifth, College and Norton street and other thoroughfares. The committee also urged that the Pennsylvania railroad company be requested to construct a substantial bumper for a siding at the foot of Walnut street where it is claimed the street is being damaged by cars which are frequently backed off the end of the track.

Ministerial Meet Will be Held Monday Morning in Y. M. C. A.

Plans which will have for their object the conservation of the fruits of the Dr. W. A. Biederwolf campaign will be discussed by ministers of the city at a meeting to be held on Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A., according to announcement today by Rev. F. A. Dean, president of the Ministerial association.

A campaign of individual evangelism will get under way in full force following the close of the Dr. Biederwolf revival, if tentative arrangements of the association are formally approved.

Dr. Biederwolf, who will attend the conference, is expected to advance suggestions for the furtherance of he movement.

terian church and long a spiritual companion of Mr. Thompson. "He was of God, given to us by God to sing of God and men," was his characterization.

Dr. Clark glowingly gave pictures of Mr. Thompson's sincerity of purpose, his deep spiritual intention and the depth of his love for his fellow man.

"Columbiana county has been nationally known because of its potteries, the presence within it of Round Knob, Ohio's second highest point and the home of W. L. Thompson," said Dr. Clark. "I wonder if East Liverpool appreciates the fact that woven in its warp and wool is the life of this man who by his Christian and business life made it known so widely.

I will recall him at a small school house meeting where Dr. E. M. McMillan, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and myself held a meeting. He himself played a small organ and with what Unction he sang himself "I Can Believe, I Do Believe," with emphasis on the 'do.'

"I could rest my whole faith on his hymn, "If God Be My Father,' 'Tis Well." God's fatherhood, Christ Saviourhood and the Holy Spirits power are optimized in this single contrition."

Dr. Clark told of the song, "Come Where the Lillies Bloom" which as a quartette has and is being sung all over this country. He mentioned the recent resume of the belief of a friend who for 30 years has been in the interior of China as a missionary who declared it to be but a simple faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour, God as father and the Holy Spirit freely supplying all the power needed.

"Such was the faith of W. L. Thompson as I regarded him," affirmed Dr. Clark. "He grew and developed in his spiritual life until maturity was reached when he wrote "One Thousand Years JesusOn Earth Shall Reign." I can pay [illegible] tribute than to voice my belief that he attained this superior spirtual height."

Mr. McEwan announced the writing in 1888 of "Oh, To Be More Like Jesus," "Some One in Heaven Thinks of Me," "The Still Small Voice of Jesus," in 1904, and "Softly, Tenderly Jesus is Calling" at a later period. These and others of his songs were sung by the choir.

Dr. Biederwolf Praises Composer.

Dr. Biederwolf also added his modicum of praise. "I want to add my tribute to a great soul," he said. It is not possible to say what is in my heart regarding him. Though I had frequent correspondence with him regarding the use of his hymns in which he was remarkably generous, I never met him personally. But I read in his works the beautiful spirit that stirred in his soul."

Dr. Biederwolf announced that the wreath of flowers procured by the evangelistic party and which hung from the stand on the platform would be placed on Mr. Thompson's grave in Riverview cemetery at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

Following the meeting the choir lingered on the platform where to her surprise, Miss Edwina Wilson, of Gardendale, the young high school student, who during every night and some afternoon services of the campaign, was presented a purse of gold by Director McEwan as a token of his and the choir's appreciation. Nothing daunted by the humorous comments of the wielder of the baton nor the applause of the choral members, she responded with a pretty speech of acher superb and constant work with ceptance which was in keeping with the instrument.

As if furthering sensing the near-ending of the campaign, J. O. Heddleston, who, with J. H. Newman and Norman Pilgrim, has done yeoman service as registrar of the big choir during the revival, presented, on behalf of that organization and "other friends," Miss Wilma E. Davis with a small silk parasol, Dr. Biederwolf, Mr. McEwan and "Sunny Jim" Heaton each with a 54-piece set of Willow dinner service and A. G. Breaks, caretaker of the tabernacle, a gold fountain pen and pencil. All made happy responses, each expressing regret at leaving East Liverpool and appreciation of the remembrances made.

Preceding the tabernacle service at 6:30 in the First Presbyterian church laymen of the co-operative churches of the campaign effected a permanent organization for the carrying on of religious activities throughout the city following listening to addresses by W. F. Fraser, prominent Pittsburgh business man and A. H. Purkiss, Secretary of the Laymen's movement there.

Upon recommendation of a nominating committee of Dr. F. A. Dean, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, was chairman the following officers were elected: president, Mayor Charles Brown, vice-president, Harry Watkins; secretary, T. T. Jones, treasurer, E. K. Bennett; executive committee, D. M. Ogilvie, W. T. McNutt and J. P. Ebert.

Another meeting of the organization will be held at the tabernacle at 6:30 o'clock on next Monday evening just previous to the sacred concert by the choir. Dr. Biederwolf will, as on Friday night, be present. Then plans will be made for the future activities of the members.

"Christ's own program calls for the winning of individual souls by personal work of Christians," asserted Mr. Fraser at the meeting. "'Go ye into all the world and lo I am with you' is the divine command and promise of aid. We must sell Jesus Christ to those about us as salesmen dispose of their goods. Both are needed. More than 1,000 men in recent months have in Allegheny county. There is no joy comparable to that of winning souls for the Master."

Mr. Parkiss spoke in similar vein. "Jesus Christ has the right to command us to win souls for Him," he said. It is our duty to obey his injunction 'Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations'. When we do not then we are disobedient to Him. No skill other than Christ with us is other way to save the churches and needed to do this work. There is no other manner in which to finally save ourselves."

Both visitors were received with a warm welcome. They were unable to remain for the tabernacle service, but boarded a car for Beaver immediately at the close of the service. Those attending went in a body to the tabernacle, a band, that of the K. K. K. meeting and leading them to their destination.

Study Bible is Advice.

The invocation at the tabernacle was made by Dr. J. O. Campbell, pastor of the Second United Presbyterian church and the consecration prayer was by Rev. A. H. O'Brien, pastor of the First Paptist church.

"Study your Bible and get a good one to do so" advised Dr. Biederwolf in his sermon to converts and those reconsecrated. "Don't forget to pray. The christian who does not pray will not amount to much."

BRITONS KILL 13 SUDANESE

Two British Officers Slain and Eight Soldiers Wounded.

KHARTUM, Egypt, Nov. 29.—The British artillery today razed the house where the Egyptian army insurgents took refuge and killed 13 Sudanese soldiers. The remainder surrendered.

CAIRO, Nov. 29.—Two British officers were killed and eight soldiers wounded in the operation against the Sudanese mutineers, it was learned today. The situation is under control, according to advices from Khartoum.

Communication wiht Khartoum was on a halting and difficult schedule today through slashing of the telegraph wires, but latest reports stated that serious street fighting had been going on. The mutinous Sudanese who killed three physicians and destroyed the Khartoum hospital yesterday are surrounded by British troops.

Warnings have been issued to the Sudanese troops tha tthe penalty for mutiny will be death and that executions will be ordered of members of the organization in which the mutiny originates.

The Suedaneese have but little ammunition and the British control the machine guns and ammunition stores, which are under heavy guard.

It is reported that an Italian attorney was killed during yesterday's attack.

Though the meager advices did not state, it is believed probable that martial law has been declared in Khartoum.

River boats entering the Sudan have cancelled their schedules and the only consistent communication has been via wireless.

County Automobile Club Opposes Any Ohio Gasoline Tax

Holding that the automobile owner is already overtaxed, the board of directors of the Columbiana County Motor club, at a meeting held in Lisbon last night, went on record as being opposed to any form of gasoline tax in Ohio, unless such a tax goes direct to the state highway department. The club also opposed a two-cent "gas" tax with a reduction in the license fee to $3 with graduated tax on trucks and busses.

State highway traffic patrol was also opposed. The club approved legislation requiring all automobile drivers to be licensed, compulsory automobile liability insurance, requiring applications for licenses to be accompanied by bill of state, requiring traffic officers to be uniformed, curbing jurisdiction of so-called "kangaroo courts" and for the restoration of the half-mill levy for highway construction.

Election of directors will take place early in January.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Under the leadership of the steel, motor and industrial stocks, the main body of speculative stocks swung into higher price levels in the short session of the stock market today. Price movements were decidedly mixed in the railroad and oil stocks, some stocks going forward to higher prices, while others declined under fairly heavily selling pressure.

United States steel and Studebaker continued at the head respectively of the steel and motor stocks, though the independent steels in the former group and General Motors, Willys-Overland Allied Motor Accessory stocks gave new exhibitions of strength.

The rise in the reserve ratio of the New York Federal Reserve bank from 76.5 per cent a week ago to 78.2 afforded an evidence of the strong position of the money market and confirmed impressions in Wall street that Friday's advance in call money rates to 4 per cent reflected nothing more han preparation for month-end financing. The week end business reviews of the principal mercantile agencies were perhaps the most favorable with respect to present performances and optimistic in their outlooks.

Expansion of the operations of Bethlehem, Repolgle, Youngstown and other important steel manufacturers was vouched for by the officials of the various companies.

Family Feud Ends In Three Deaths And One Wounding

MINTURN, Colo., Nov. 29—A family feud of several months' standing ended here today with the death of three persons and the slight wounding of a fourth, when John Cordova shot and killed Petrolio Parvis, a rancher, and Parvis' stepdaughter, Lotrilla Paltinco, 16-years-old, then, after wounding the girl's stepmother, fired a bullet into his own brain.

According to City Marshall De Long, Cordova went to the cabin and renewed a quarrel which started six months ago when Cordova was forcibly ejected from the Parvis home because the latter objected to Cordova's attention to the stepdaughter.

General Pershing

masks greatly reduced the number of casualties.

"Moreover," General Pershing reports, "I am not ready to concede that such inhuman destruction of noncombatants — through the wholesale wiping out of populations by gas—would be undertaken by any civilized nation, even though possible."

On general questions of national defense, General Pershing asserts the United States must make no further reductions in the army; but, on the other hand, must restore decreases made since 1921.

"We are down to rock-bottom," General Pershing reports, "and no further cuts can be made without endangering the whole scheme. Efficiency and economy cannot be achieved under such fluctuation in strength. Economic plans are fruitless without stabilization in the basic factors of numbers and organization."

More Ammunition.

On the question of ammunition and other war supplies, General Pershing reports:

"It goes without saying that arms and ammunition are vital to our armies, but never yet in my time has any forethought been given to this subject. Our experience in the World War was most humiliating. Not a single round of artillery ammunition of our own manufacture was fired by us up to the armistice, except from the 4.7s and the five naval guns on railway mounts; and the quantity was negligible as compared with the millions of rounds used. To put production of ammunition on a large quantity basis requires both time and previous preparation. During the period after an emergency arises, while factories are expanding, there must be a certain supply of all necessary kinds on hand, or we should be helpless. We should begin to build up a reserve supply and keep our factories in a reasonable state of readiness for expansion."

Improved coast defences are also necessary, General Pershing reports.

"We know that fleets cannot successfully attack coast defences where there is anything like a parity of armament," he asserts, "and to be safe the wise thing would be to outrange them. Modern guns, with improved fire control, should be installed to protect our coast cities, and every consideration should be given to the possibilities of long-range railway artillery."

General Pershing also recommends strongly that the present national defense policy be maintained and expanded, asserting that it has been an unqualified success.

Woman Drinks Poison

report of the gun, but believing it was some article falling from a shelf, paid no attention to the sound. A minute or two later Mrs. Evans walked into the bedroom occupied by Mrs. Orr and her husband, and told them that she had shot herself. Then, weakened from the loss of blood, she fell to the floor.

The wounded woman was carried to a bed and efforts were made to call a physician from a neighbor's telephone. The Miller ambulance was called and the victim was rushed to the city hospital, where Dr. C. H. Bailey attended her.

"My family is not responsible for this," Mrs. Evans told friends at the hospital. "I just couldn't stand the way people were talking about me," was her reply to questions. She was conscious after being taken to the hospital, but was very weak from the loss of blood.

Mrs. Evans is said to have been in failing health for several weeks and at times seemed melancholy. Just before retiring last evening she is said to have remarked that "people were talking about me." Members of the family were unable to explain the remark, beneving that it was an hallucination.

Find Poison Tablets

The woman told hospital attendants that she took but two of the bichloride of mercury tablets. The bottle containing the poison, which originally held 25 tablets, contained but 11 when found this morning.

Chief of Police McDermott made an investigation of the case this morning. He took charge of the revolver which the woman had used in the attempt to take her life.

Hospital authorities at 11 o'clock this morning stated that Mrs. Evans was in a serious condition.

THE FOUR-LEAFED CLOVER—NO. 36.

LUCK should be with you, puzzle fans, in attempting to solve today's unusual twister—the Four-Leafed Clover. Hence the advice to proceed carefully and the "tip" which would ordinarily be published Monday can be dispensed with.

The synonyms and word descriptions for today's puzzle are printed below. With the titular promise of good luck and the sparsity and simplicity of the concealed words it should not take long to solve.

adopted. There was no lengthy discussion of the proposed legislation, however, when it was decided that it would not be considered until the next session.

An ordinance authorizing the city to borrow $70,000 to pay the property holders' share in the improvement of Franklin, Riverview, Jefferson, Cadmus, Monroe and West Eighth streets,, McKinnon avenue and Rural lane in anticipation of the collection of special assessments was placed on first reading. Because of the absence of Councilmen Eardley and Hayes, it was impossible to suspend the rules and enact the ordinance on second and third readings.

City Engineer George was instructed to prepare estimates on the cost of building a storm sewer over a run which runs parallel with Pennsylvania and Harker avenues, East End. A delegation of the property holders asked for this improvement.

Council ordered the service director to send a bill to William Tracy of Minerva street for constructing a sidewalk in front of his property. Tracy appeared at the meeting and told council he had awarded the contract for his walk, but before the contractors he had engaged started work, the city put in the walk at his expense. He expressed the desire to pay for the improvement at once.

Service Director Ellis reported that the street lighting fund for the remainder of the year was exhausted, but his communication was filed. He also reported that negotiations were under way with the officials of the Y. & O. railroad to provide a roadway to Dresden avenue for residents in the vicinity of Claiborne avenue.

The service director asked council's aid relative to a complaint made by the United States engineers' office at Pittsburgh, that waste from a pottery is being emptied near the wharfboat landing from a sewer leading into the Ohio river at the foot of Broadway. It is said that this sewer comes down Apple alley and formerly led far out into the river. When the wharfboat landing was dredged, it is claimed, this sewer was torn up, so that now refuse is emptied close to the shore. Council, with the city engineer and service director, will view the place in an effort to remedy the situation.

Depository Commission Reports.

The depository commission reported $438.53 in local banks for the month of October. The service director also reported rentals on city property amounting to $535 as having been collected since September 10.

Council N. P. Kerr, reporting for the street committee, urged improvement of Myrtle avenue, Elizabeth, Sixth, West Eighth, Fifth, College and Norton street and other thoroughfares. The committee also urged that the Pennsylvania railroad company be requested to construct a substantial bumper for a siding at the foot of Walnut street where it is claimed the street is being damaged by cars which are frequently backed off the end of the track.

Dean, president of the Ministerial association.

A campaign of individual evangelism will get under way in full force following the close of the Dr. Biederwolf revival, if tentative arrangements of the association are formally approved.

Dr. Biederwolf, who will attend the conference, is expected to advance suggestions for the furtherance of he movement.

not, after the first attack, so destructive on either side as generally believed, and the development of gasterian church and long a spiritual companion of Mr. Thompson. "He was of God, given to us by God to sing of God and men," was his characterization.

Dr. Clark glowingly gave pictures of Mr. Thompson's sincerity of purpose, his deep spiritual intention and the depth of his love for his fellow man.

"Columbiana county has been nationally known because of its potteries, the presence within it of Round Knob, Ohio's second highest point and the home of W. L. Thompson," said Dr. Clark. "I wonder if East Liverpool appreciates the fact that woven in its warp and wool is the life of this man who by his Christian and business life made it known so widely.

I will recall him at a small school house meeting where Dr. E. M. McMillan, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and myself held a meeting. He himself played a small organ and with what Unction he sang himself "I Can Believe, I Do Believe," with emphasis on the 'do.'

"I could rest my whole faith on his hymn, "If God Be My Father,' 'Tis Well." God's fatherhood, Christ Saviourheod and the Holy Spirits power are optimized in this single contrition."

Dr. Clark told of the song, "Come Where the Lillies Bloom" which as a quartette has and is being sung all over this country. He mentioned the recent resume of the belief of a friend who for 30 years has been in the interior of China as a missionary who declared it to be but a simple faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour, God as father and the Holy Spirit freely supplying all the power needed.

"Such was the faith of W. L. Thompson as I regarded him," affirmed Dr. Clark. "He grew and developed in his spiritual life until maturity was reached when he wrote "One Thousand Years JesusOn Earth Shall Reign." I can pay [illegible] tribute than to voice my belief that he attained this superior spirtual height."

Mr. McEwan announced the writing in 1888 of "Oh, To Be More Like Jesus," "Some One in Heaven Thinks of Me," "The Still Small Voice of Jesus," in 1904, and "Softly, Tenderly Jesus is Calling" at a later period. These and others of his songs were sung by the choir.

Dr. Biederwolf Praises Composer.

Dr. Biederwolf also added his modicum of praise. "I want to add my tribute to a great soul," he said. It is not possible to say what is in my heart regarding him. Though I had frequent correspondence with him regarding the use of his hymns in which he was remarkably generous, I never met him personally. But I read in his works the beautiful spirit that stirred in his soul."

Dr. Biederwolf announced that the wreath of flowers procured by the evangelistic party and which hung from the stand on the platform would be placed on Mr. Thompson's grave in Riverview cemetery at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

Following the meeting the choir lingered on the platform where to her surprise, Miss Edwina Wilson, of Gardendale, the young high school student, who during every night and some afternoon services of the campaign, was presented a purse of gold by Director McEwan as a token of his and the choir's appreciation. Nothing daunted by the humorous comments of the wielder of the baton nor the applause of the choral members, she responded with a pretty speech of acher superb and constant work with ceptance which was in keeping with the instrument.

As if furthering sensing the nearending of the campaign, J. O. Heddleston, who, with J. H. Newman and Norman Pilgrim, has done yeoman service as registrar of the big choir during the revival, presented, on behalf of that organization and "other friends," Miss Wilma E. Davis with a small silk parasol, Dr. Biederwolf, Mr. McEwan and "Sunny Jim" Heaton each with a 54-piece set of Willow dinner service and A. G. Breaks, caretaker of the tabernacle, a gold fountain pen and pencil. All made happy responses, each expressing regret at leaving East Liverpool and appreciation of the remembrances made.

Preceding the tabernacle service at 6:30 in the First Presbyterian church laymen of the co-operative churches of the campaign effected a permanent organization for the carrying on of religious activities throughout the city following listening to addresses by W F. Fraser, prominent Pittsburgh business man and A. H. Purkiss, Secretary of the Laymen's movement there.

Upon recommendation of a nominating committee of Dr. F. A. Dean, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, was chairman the following officers were elected: president, Mayor Charles Brown, vice-president, Harry Watkins; secretary, T. T. Jones, treasurer, E. K. Bennett; executive committee, D. M. Ogilvie, W. T. McNutt and J. [illegible] Ebert.

Another meeting of the organization will be held at the tabernacle at 6:30 o'clock on next Monday evening just previous to the sacred concert by the choir. Dr. Biederwolf will, as on Friday night, be present. Then plans will be made for the future activities of the members.

"Christ's own program calls for the winning of individual souls by personal work of Christians," asserted Mr. Fraser at the meeting. "'Go ye into all the world and lo I am with you' is the divine command and promise of aid. We must sell Jesus Christ to those about us as salesmen dispose of their goods. Both are needed. More than 1,000 men in recent months have in Allegheny county. There is no joy comparable to that of winning souls for the Master."

Mr. Parkiss spoke in similar vein. "Jesus Christ has the right to command us to win souls for Him," he said. It is our duty to obey his injunction 'Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations'. When we do not then we are disobedient to Him. No skill other than Christ with us is other way to save the churches and needed to do this work. There is no other manner in which to finally save ourselves."

Both visitors were received with a warm welcome. They were unable to remain for the tabernacle service, but boarded a car for Beaver immediately at the close of the service. Those attending went in a body to the tabernacle, a band, that of the K. K. K. meeting and leading them to their destination.

Study Bible is Advice.

The invocation at the tabernacle was made by Dr. J. O. Campbell, pastor of the Second United Presbyterian church and the consecration prayer was by Rev. A. H. O'Brien, pastor of the First Paptist church.

"Study your Bible and get a good one to do so" advised Dr. Biederwolf in his sermon to converts and those reconsecrated. "Don't forget to pray. The christian who does not pray will not amount to much."

BRITONS KILL 13 SUDANESE

Two British Officers Slain and Eight Soldiers Wounded.

KHARTUM, Egypt, Nov. 29.—The British artillery today razed the house where the Egyptian army insurgents took refuge and killed 13 Sudanese soldiers. The remainder surrendered.

CAIRO, Nov. 29.—Two British officers were killed and eight soldiers wounded in the operation against the Sudanese mutineers, it was learned today. The situation is under control, according to advices from Khartoum.

Communication wiht Khartoum was on a halting and difficult schedule today through slashing of the telegraph wires, but latest reports stated that serious street fighting had been going on. The mutinous Sudanese who killed three physicians and destroyed the Khartoum hospital yesterday are surrounded by British troops.

Warnings have been issued to the Sudanese troops tha tthe penalty for mutiny will be death and that executions will be ordered of members of the organization in which the mutiny originates.

The Suedaneese have but little ammunition and the British control the machine guns and ammunition stores, which are under heavy guard.

It is reported that an Italian attorney was killed during yesterday's attack.

Though the meager advices did not state, it is believed probable that martial law has been declared in Khartoum.

River boats entering the Sudan have cancelled their schedules and the only consistent communication has been via wireless.

County Automobile Club Opposes Any Ohio Gasoline Tax

Holding that the automobile owner is already overtaxed, the board of directors of the Columbiana County Motor club, at a meeting held in Lisbon last night, went on record as being opposed to any form of gasoline tax in Ohio, unless such a tax goes direct to the state highway department. The club also opposed a two-cent "gas" tax with a reduction in the license fee to $3 with graduated tax on trucks and busses.

State highway traffic patrol was also opposed. The club approved legislation requiring all automobile drivers to be licensed, compulsory automobile liability insurance, requiring applications for licenses to be accompanied by bill of state, requiring traffic officers to be uniformed, curbing jurisdiction of so-called "kangaroo courts" and for the restoration of the half-mill levy for highway construction.

Election of directors will take place early in January.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Under the leadership of the steel, motor and industrial stocks, the main body of speculative stocks swung into higher price levels in the short session of the stock market today. Price movements were decidedly mixed in the railroad and oil stocks, some stocks going forward to higher prices, while others declined under fairly heavily selling pressure.

United States steel and Studebaker continued at the head respectively of the steel and motor stocks, though the independent steels in the former group and General Motors, Willys-Overland Allied Motor Accessory stocks gave new exhibitions of strength.

The rise in the reserve ratio of the New York Federal Reserve bank from 76.5 per cent a week ago to 78.2 afforded an evidence of the strong position of the money market and confirmed impressions in Wall street that Friday's advance in call money rates to 4 per cent reflected nothing more han preparation for month-end financing. The week end business reviews of the principal mercantile agencies were perhaps the most favorable with respect to present performances and optimistic in their outlooks.

Expansion of the operations of Bethlehem, Repolgle, Youngstown and other important steel manufacturers was vouched for by the officials of the various companies.

Family Feud Ends In Three Deaths And One Wounding

MINTURN, Colo., Nov. 29—A family feud of several months' standing ended here today with the death of three persons and the slight wounding of a fourth, when John Cordova shot and killed Petrolio Parvis, a rancher, and Parvis' stepdaughter, Lotrila Paltinco, 16-years-old, then, after wounding the girl's stepmother, fired a bullet into his own brain.

According to City Marshall De Long, Cordova went to the cabin and renewed a quarrel which started six months ago when Cordova was forcibly ejected from the Parvis home because the latter objected to Cordova's attention to the stepdaughter.

General Pershing

masks greatly reduced the number of casualties.

"Moreover," General Pershing reports, "I am not ready to concede that such inhuman destruction of noncombatants — through the wholesale wiping out of populations by gas—would be undertaken by any civilized nation, even though possible."

On general questions of national defense, General Pershing asserts the United States must make no further reductions in the army; but, on the other hand, must restore decreases made since 1921.

"We are down to rock-bottom," General Pershing reports, "and no further cuts can be made without endangering the whole scheme. Efficiency and economy cannot be achieved under such fluctuation in strength. Economic plans are fruitless without stabilization in the basic factors of numbers and organization."

More Ammunition.

On the question of ammunition and other war supplies, General Pershing reports:

"It goes without saying that arms and ammunition are vital to our armies, but never yet in my time has any forethought been given to this subject. Our experience in the World War was most humiliating. Not a single round of artillery ammunition of our own manufacture was fired by us up to the armistice, except from the 4.7s and the five naval guns on railway mounts; and the quantity was negligible as compared with the millions of rounds used. To put production of ammunition on a large quantity basis requires both time and previous preparation. During the period after an emergency arises, while factories are expanding, there must be a certain supply of all necessary kinds on hand, or we should be helpless. We should begin to build up a reserve supply and keep our factories in a reasonable state of readiness for expansion."

Improved coast defences are also necessary, General Pershing reports.

"We know that fleets cannot successfully attack coast defences where there is anything like a parity of armament," he asserts, "and to be safe the wise thing would be to outrange them. Modern guns, with improved fire control, should be installed to protect our coast cities, and every consideration should be given to the possibilities of long-range railway artillery."

General Pershing also recommends strongly that the present national defense policy be maintained and expanded, asserting that it has been an unqualified success.

Woman Drinks Poison

report of the gun, but believing it was some article falling from a shelf, paid no attention to the sound. A minute or two later Mrs. Evans walked into the bedroom occupied by Mrs. Orr and her husband, and told them that she had shot herself. Then, weakened from the loss of blood, she fell to the floor.

The wounded woman was carried to a bed and efforts were made to call a physician from a neighbor's telephone. The Miller ambulance was called and the victim was rushed to the city hospital, where Dr. C. H. Bailey attended her.

"My family is not responsible for this," Mrs. Evans told friends at the hospital. "I just couldn't stand the way people were talking about me," was her reply to questions. She was conscious after being taken to the hospital, but was very weak from the loss of blood.

Mrs. Evans is said to have been in failing health for several weeks and at times seemed melancholy. Just before retiring last evening she is said to have remarked that "people were talking about me." Members of the family were unable to explain the remark, beneving that it was an hallucination.

Find Poison Tablets

The woman told hospital attendants that she took but two of the bichloride of mercury tablets. The bottle containing the poison, which originally held 25 tablets, contained but 11 when found this morning.

Chief of Police McDermott made an investigation of the case this morning. He took charge of the revolver which the woman had used in the attempt to take her life.

Hospital authorities at 11 o'clock this morning stated that Mrs. Evans was in a serious condition.

City May

adopted. There was no lengthy discussion of the proposed legislation, however, when it was decided that it would not be considered until the next session.

An ordinance authorizing the city to borrow $70,000 to pay the property holders' share in the improvement of Franklin, Riverview, Jefferson, Cadmus, Monroe and West Eighth streets,, McKinnon avenue and Rural lane in anticipation of the collection of special assessments was placed on first reading. Because of the absence of Councilmen Eardley and Hayes, it was impossible to suspend the rules and enact the ordinance on second and third readings.

City Engineer George was instructed to prepare estimates on the cost of building a storm sewer over a run which runs parallel with Pennsylvania and Harker avenues, East End. A delegation of the property holders asked for this improvement.

Council ordered the service director to send a bill to William Tracy of Minerva street for constructing a sidewalk in front of his property. Tracy appeared at the meeting and told council he had awarded the contract for his walk, but before the contractors he had engaged started work, the city put in the walk at his expense. He expressed the desire to pay for the improvement at once.

Service Director Ellis reported that the street lighting fund for the remainder of the year was exhausted, but his communication was filed. He also reported that negotiations were under way with the officials of the Y. & O. railroad to provide a roadway to Dresden avenue for residents in the vicinity of Claiborne avenue.

The service director asked council's aid relative to a complaint made by the United States engineers' office at Pittsburgh, that waste from a pottery is being emptied near the wharfboat landing from a sewer leading into the Ohio river at the foot of Broadway. It is said that this sewer comes down Apple alley and formerly led far out into the river. When the wharfboat landing was dredged, it is claimed, this sewer was torn up, so that now refuse is emptied close to the shore. Council, with the city engineer and service director, will view the place in an effort to remedy the situation.

Depository Commission Reports.

The depository commission reported $438.53 in local banks for the month of October. The service director also reported rentals on city property amounting to $535 as having been collected since September 10.

Council N. P. Kerr, reporting for the street committee, urged improvement of Myrtle avenue, Elizabeth, Sixth, West Eighth, Fifth, College and Norton street and other thoroughfares. The committee also urged that the Pennsylvania railroad company be requested to construct a substantial bumper for a sliding at the foot of Walnut street where it is claimed the street is being damaged by cars which are frequently backed off the end of the track.

Dean, president of the Ministerial association.

A campaign of individual evangelism will get under way in full force following the close of the Dr. Biederwolf revival, if tentative arrangements of the association are formally approved.

Dr. Biederwolf, who will attend the conference, is expected to advance suggestions for the furtherance of he movement.

not, after the first attack, so destructive on either side as generally believed, and the development of gas terian church and long a spiritual companion of Mr. Thompson. "He was of God, given to us by God to sing of God and men," was his characterization.

Dr. Clark glowingly gave pictures of Mr. Thompson's sincerity of purpose, his deep spiritual intention and the depth of his love for his fellow man.

"Columbiana county has been nationally known because of its potteries, the presence within it of Round Knob, Ohio's second highest point and the home of W. L. Thompson," said Dr. Clark. "I wonder if East Liverpool appreciates the fact that woven in its warp and wool is the life of this man who by his Christian and business life made it known so widely.

I will recall him at a small school house meeting where Dr. E. M. McMillan, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and myself held a meeting. He himself played a small organ and with what Unction he sang himself "I Can Believe, I Do Believe," with emphasis on the 'do.'

"I could rest my whole faith on his hymn. "If God Be My Father,' 'Tis Well." God's fatherhood, Christ Saviourhood and the Holy Spirits power are optimized in this single contrition."

Dr. Clark told of the song, "Come Where the Lillies Bloom" which as a quartette has and is being sung all over this country. He mentioned the recent resume of the belief of a friend who for 30 years has been in the interior of China as a missionary who declared it to be but a simple faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour, God as father and the Holy Spirit freely supplying all the power needed.

"Such was the faith of W. L. Thompson as I regarded him," affirmed Dr. Clark. "He grew and developed in his spiritual life until maturity was reached when he wrote "One Thousand Years Jesus On Earth Shall Reign." I can say, [illegible] than to voice my belief that he attained this superior spirtual height."

Mr. McEwan announced the writing in 1888 of "Oh, To Be More Like Jesus," "Some One in Heaven Thinks of Me," "The Still Small Voice of Jesus," in 1904, and "Softly, Tenderly Jesus is Calling" at a later period. These and others of his songs were sung by the choir.

Dr. Biederwolf Praises Composer.

Dr. Biederwolf also added his modicum of praise. "I want to add my tribute to a great soul," he said. It is not possible to say what is in my heart regarding him. Though I had frequent correspondence with him regarding the use of his hymns in which he was remarkably generous, I never met him personally. But I read in his works the beautiful spirit that stirred in his soul."

Dr. Biederwolf announced that the wreath of flowers procured by the evangelistic party and which hung from the stand on the platform would be placed on Mr. Thompson's grave in Riverview cemetery at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

Following the meeting the choir lingered on the platform where to her surprise, Miss Edwina Wilson, of Gardendale, the young high school student, who during every night and some afternoon services of the campaign, was presented a purse of gold by Director McEwan as a token of his and the choir's appreciation. Nothing daunted by the humorous comments of the wielder of the baton nor the applause of the choral members, she responded with a pretty speech of acher superb and constant work with ceptance which was in keeping with the instrument.

As if furthering sensing the nearending of the campaign, J. O. Heddleston, who, with J. H. Newman and Norman Pilgrim, has done yeoman service as registrar of the big choir during the revival, presented, on behalf of that organization and "other friends," Miss Wilma E. Davis with a small silk parasol, Dr. Biederwolf, Mr. McEwan and "Sunny Jim" Heaton each with a 54-piece set of Willow dinner service and A. G. Breaks, caretaker of the tabernacle, a gold fountain pen and pencil. All made happy responses, each expressing regret at leaving East Liverpool and appreciation of the remembrances made.

Preceding the tabernacle service at 6:30 in the First Presbyterian church laymen of the co-operative churches of the campaign effected a permanent organization for the carrying on of religious activities throughout the city following listening to addresses by W F. Fraser, prominent Pittsburgh business man and A. H. Purkiss, Secretary of the Laymen's movement there.

Upon recommendation of a nominating committee of Dr. F. A. Dean, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church was chairman the following officers were elected: president, Mayor Charles Brown, vice-president, Harry Watkins; secretary, T. T. Jones, treasurer, E. K. Bennett; executive committee, D. M. Ogilvie, W. T. McNutt and J. Ebert.

Another meeting of the organization will be held at the tabernacle at 6:30 o'clock on next Monday evening just previous to the sacred concert by the choir. Dr. Biederwolf will, as on Friday night, be present.. Then plans will be made for the future activities of the members.

"Christ's own program calls for the winning of individual souls by personal work of Christians," asserted Mr. Fraser at the meeting. "'Go ye into all the world and lo I am with you' is the divine command and promise of aid. We must sell Jesus Christ to those about us as salesmen dispose of their goods. Both are needed. More than 1,000 men in recent months have in Allegheny county. There is no joy comparable to that of winning souls for the Master."

Mr. Parkiss spoke in similar vein. "Jesus Christ has the right to command us to win souls for Him," he said. It is our duty to obey his injunction 'Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations'. When we do not then we are disobedient to Him. No skill other than Christ with us is other way to save the churches and needed to do this work. There is no other manner in which to finally save ourselves."

Both visitors were received with a warm welcome. They were unable to remain for the tabernacle service, but boarded a car for Beaver immediately at the close of the service. Those attending went in a body to the tabernacle, a band, that of the K. K. K. meeting and leading them to their destination.

Study Bible is Advice.

The invocation at the tabernacle was made by Dr. J. O. Campbell, pastor of the Second United Presbyterian church and the consecration prayer was by Rev. A. H. O'Brien, pastor of the First Paptist church.

"Study your Bible and get a good one to do so" advised Dr. Biederwolf in his sermon to converts and those reconsecrated. "Don't forget to pray. The christian who does not pray will not amount to much."

"KIKI" COMES HERE DEC. 9

Marguerite Risser Plays Title Role in Big Show.

Miss Marguerite Risser, who plays the title role in "Kiki," David Belasco's sensational version of Andre Picardi's play which will be presented at the Ceramic one performance only, Tuesday, December 9, is a New Yorker by birth and choice and who has made good on Broadway when the opportunity came to her.

Miss Risser comes of a family which has made great strides along professional lines.

When Marguerite was a tiny girl she began to show interest in everything pertaining to the theatre and when she was fourteen years old she attracted the attention of Mr. Gasnier, of the Pathe Studios, who wanted her to pose, which she did, playing child parts.

While she is most proficient in pantomime with all the other requisites necessary to make a success assured on the screen, Miss Risser prefers the speaking stage.

Her first important engagement was with the Selwyns in "Twin Beds," and the next heard of her she was engaged by Arthur Hopkins to play in "Good Gracious Annabelle."

The following season A. H. Woods selected her for "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" and her success in this farce brought her to the attention of Sargent Aborn producer of "The Broken Thing" who engaged her for the leading feminine role, the character being a Spanish Mexican girl.

Under the management of Joseph M. Gaites she created a most unusual [illegible] in "The Monster," her characterization through the three acts touching every phase of human emotion. It was in this play that Mr. Belasco saw her, and he remarked at the time, "there is the little artist who can play "Kiki."

Miss Risser does not favor the "types" but has a distinct individuality of her own. Her slim figure is mobile to pose and quick in animating suggestion. Her speaking voice, in turn, is decidely pliant, warm and colorful and has individual flavor as well. She is of the distinct brunette type.

Autoist Faces Trial.

DEFIANCE, O.—Trial of Harold Slough, 27, of Bryan, who was indicted for manslaughter on two counts, will be started December 22 in common pleas court here, Judge F. L. Hay announced. Slough, confessed driver of the automobile which ran into a buggy at Farmer, O., the night of November 5, killing Ward C. Smith, and his 6-year-old son, was released from the county jail under $2,000 bond, after pleading not guilty to the indictments.

Tokio, Jauan, will pave the equivalent of 211 acres of streets within the next three years.

During the visit of the prince, the prevailing weather conditions were no doubt due to commotion among the spirits of '76.

According to tenants, most apartment houses are mere chilling stations.

"KIKI" COMES HERE DEC. 9

Marguerite Risser Plays Title Role in Big Show.

Miss Marguerite Risser, who plays the title role in "Kiki," David Belasco's sensational version of Andre Picardi's play which will be presented at the Ceramic one performance only, Tuesday, December 9, is a New Yorker by birth and choice and who has made good on Broadway when the opportunity came to her.

Miss Risser comes of a family which has made great strides along professional lines.

When Marguerite was a tiny girl she began to show interest in everything pertaining to the theatre and when she was fourteen years old she attracted the attention of Mr. Gasnier, of the Pathe Studios, who wanted her to pose, which she did, playing child parts.

While she is most proficient in pantomime with all the other requisites necessary to make a success assured on the screen, Miss Risser prefers the speaking stage.

Her first important engagement was with the Selwyns in "Twin Beds," and the next heard of her she was engaged by Arthur Hopkins to play in "Good Gracious Annabelle."

The following season A. H. Woods selected her for "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" and her success in this farce brought her to the attention of Sargent Aborn producer of "The Broken Thing" who engaged her for the leading feminine role, the character being a Spanish Mexican girl.

Under the management of Joseph M. Gaites she created a most unusual [illegible] in "The Monster," her characterization through the three acts touching every phase of human emotion. It was in this play that Mr. Belasco saw her, and he remarked at the time, "there is the little artist who can play "Kiki."

Miss Risser does not favor the "types" but has a distinct individuality of her own. Her slim figure is mobile to pose and quick in animating suggestion. Her speaking voice, in turn, is decidely pliant, warm and colorful and has individual flavor as well. She is of the distinct brunette type.

Smith, and his 6-year-old son, was released from the county jail under $2,000 bond, after pleading not guilty to the indictments.

Tokio, Jauan, will pave the equivalent of 211 acres of streets within the next three years.

The Business Cycle

Business experts are pretty well agreed that the nation is entering upon a new business cycle. The present year, as they see it, has marked the end of the last cycle, the slump and the period of readjustment. Now begins the up-turn. They do not promise any "boom" remarkable in intensity or duration, but they believe there is now beginning a period of general and prosperous business activity which will last through the next year, at least.

This is a cold, scientific conclusion of level headed observers. Recent Wall Street activity, with a buyers' market and records broken on the stock exchange, is merely a more temperamental manifestation of the same conclusion.

The renewed activity comes, the observers say, because the country is ready for it. Conditions are right, and there is nothing, political or otherwise, likely to interefre.

The November bulletin of one of the country's leading banks, accepting this favorable opinion, pays its respects to three obstacles which loom large in the minds of pessimists.

The first of these is the fear of greatly increased competition from abroad, as Europe recovers economically. The bank discounts this fear on the ground that as foreign nations increase their outputs of manufactured goods, they also become better consumers for our raw materials and many of our manufactured goods—also better customers for their own products.

The second obstacle feared, that of high wages, is considered largely offset by the high purchasing power of the American people which is made possible by the high wages.

The third obstacle, a belief that American industries are over-developed and over-expanded, is pronounced true only in exceptional cases. Industry in general seems sure to be fully occupied.

Stolen Water

Chicago is preparing to renew its fight in congress for diverting still more water from Lake Michigan, through its drainage canal. Other cities on the Great Lakes are preparing to resist that project more vigorously than ever.

The other cities protest that Chicago is already shamelessly taking more water than the law allows or than is good for the Great Lakes and the populous region they serve. The levels of all the lakes except Superior have been lowered already to a point that cripples navigation and necessitates the spending of millions to deepen channels and dredge harbors.

Moreover, they say, Chicago, under the guise of a mere sanitary drainage project, is also using for power purposes water that does not belong to her, at the expense of American and Canadian cities.

As for the "Lake-to-Gulf barge canal," the critics question the sincerity of that proposal, on the ground that such a volume of water as Chicago demands would make canal transportation impractical.

The people of the Illinois river valley are adding their protest against the "great open sewer" inflicted on them by the metropolis.

Chicago, instead of robbing the Great Lakes, may yet be obliged to dispose of her sewage at her own expense, in sanitary ways, as other cities are.

Ban On Firearms

A big Chicago mail order house has discontinued the sale of all forms of firearms. This is a big and praiseworthy contribution to public safety. It has been recognized for years that the indiscriminate sale of pistols was a boon to criminals and a prolific cause of fatal accidents. There would be no "crime wave' if criminals had no "guns," and it was always easy for them to get weapons from mail order houses when, for any reason, they could not or did not care to buy them locally. With such sources closed to them, it will be easier for states and cities to limit crime by controlling their own arms traffic.

Other mail order houses should follow this example, and probably will. Like the company in question, they should "feel that the moral side of all public questions is the right side," and also that "it is good business." But the evil will never be adequately dealt with until the government regulates the distribution of firearms.

POOR QUINEA PIGS

To prove that Mrs. Sheatsley did not crawl into her furnace, shut the door after her and burn herself to death, they have burned live guinea pigs in that same furnace.

Examination of the burned guinea pigs' lungs is supposed to prove for a future jury trial, that the clergyman's wife had been killed before she was burned. If she was dead, when burned, she could not have crawled through a furnace door 14 inches square, to burn herself.

The fact that her skull was broken in several places before she was burned helps to weaken the interesting suicide theory.

But what about the guinea pigs, and justice to them. The sparrows, worth less than a farthing each, are all counted, and does anyone doubt that a guinea pig is as important as a sparrow? How does the machinery of justice excuse burning those little guinea pigs alive?

$2,500,000 AND $60,000

You could not call this a cheap country, but we charge reasonable prices for our citizens. When a British officer, Stack, the sirdar, was killed by an Egyptian mob, England immediately collected two and a half million dollars, which will help solace the murdered man's family.

When Imbrie, United States consul, was murdered by a Persian mob, this nation politely requested an allowance of $60,000. A British sirdar is more impressive, if you like, than a plain American consul. But is the difference eual to the difference between $60,000 and $2,500,000?

TOO MUCH MUSCLE IS BAD

Don't try to develop unnatural physical strength. In the first place it is bad for the health. In the second place, vitality used up by over-developed muscles is taken from the brain, which is more important in modern days than muscle.

Frederick H. Beasley, of marvelous muscular force, could lift 20 men. A dispatch from Toronto tells of his death, only 28 years old. He had written a book, "Why Athletes Die Young," and then added one to the number of warnings.

A human body has just so much vitality, no more. It can be turned in any direction you please, made to build useless, heavy muscle or used in mental and nrve force. Too much muscular effort deprives vital organs of the strength they need, and the over-developed athlete dies young.

We exercise to cause deep breathing, getting the residual air out of the lungs, to perspire and make the millions of pores do their share of the work, and to keep the body free from stiffness.

Beyond that exercise, for a mature man, is wasted. Much more than that is dangerous.

MODERN RELIGION WANTED

The Rev. Dr. Fosdick says the people need an up-to-date faith. Some of them do but many prefer the most old-fashioned religion. For millions, nothing can take the place of David and Goliath, the fig tree that withered when it was rebuked, or that "great fish," whale, or what you please, throwing Jonah upon the beach.

There are two kinds of religious craving. One kind wants something mysterious, even something of which it can say, "I believe it, because it is impossible."

The other sort of mind demands a religion that adapts itself to the discovery that the earth is round, not suare, with the "four angels standing at the four corners of the earth."

Why not gratify both cravings, old-fashioned, and new-fashioned, without fighting about it? The kind of religion a man wants is the kind that makes him a better man. Let him have it.

Russian bonds sold to American financiers with infantile brains are now worth nothing. This column used to warn Americans against buying such trash.

Are you buying Europe's bonds now? If so, do you expect to get your money back, usurious interest and principal? You probably won't get it.

And write this on your tablets, "the bankers that peddle these bonds to you, are not buying to keep." The take the bonds, hand them to you and keep only their rake-off.

Why should the bonds not be paid?

Why is Europe demanding a reduction of two-thirds on money lent by this government?

Bacause of the unusual circumstances of the loans.

Americans are getting Europe's bonds, paying 7 per cent interest, sold at 94 cents on the dollar. That means 13 per cent interest the first year. And that is the kind of usury that ought to put the lender in jail.

He won't go to jail, but he'll pay the milder and well established penalty. He won't get his money back.

Usury will be the "unusual circumstances" to be pleaded a little later. Today's bond buyers will be told, first, we'll deduct that 13 per cent you made us pay the first year. That will make the bonds worth 87. Then, as we're entitled to credit at 3½ per cent, we deduct from your claim one-half the 7 per cent paid you plus compound interest. That does not leave much.

Yesterday Mrs. Coolidge christened the ZR-3, changing the great air boat's name to Los Angeles.

In years to come Los Angeles, with fifteen or twenty millions of population, will keep a model of ZR-3 in some museum, and children will see the "tiny little flying machine that used to be called big."

Flying ships will be biult big enough to carry ZR 3 as part of the euipment.

Thanks to the Mellon-Coolidge economy program, the cost of government will be cut below $1,8000,000,000 for next year.

That would seem high to those that once protested against a government spending $1,000,000,000 in two years. But the war has changed all that.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—This is one of those barren days when I can hear the faint rustle of my audience reaching under the seats for their hats. Nothing comes to mind worthy of chronicling after a solid hour of attempting to grab something out of the ether.

Yet I must make the gesture. And fill the space. I am filled with self pity. Everybody else has had a vacation. I never have one. No matter where I happen to be I must do the daily grind. I had rather hoped to be fired by fall.

My mail is also unsuggestive. The skies are adrizzle. A man next door has the whooping cough. And the way he whoops, my dears. Raymond Carroll sends me a photo of himself in front of a Paris cafe. In front of his is planted an aperitif. Business of O-la-la-ing.

The phone rings and a nit-wit inuiries: "Have you ever been goose bit by a mocking bird?" The voice was suspiciously like Verne Porter, editor of the Smart Set. And I replied: "No, but I have heard pheasants sing the mayonnaise." Low comedy.

Across the way in an office there is a man who works all day at a typewriter as though he must do just one more letter and catch a train. He wears a green eye-shade and looks like Calvin Coolidge. An old organ grinder wheezes out a tune at the curb.

On one of the windows in gold letters is "Harley P. Lots—Aluminum Pots." Make your own lyrics. I'm too tired. That fellow is whooping again. The phone rings. And it is a lady bootlegger who is told there is no interest.

For a half hour I have been entertained by tearing the lining out of an old house shoe. At times the strain made me puff, but I have, I must say with due modesty, done a neat job. It was just as fascinating as a loose tooth.

There used to be a writer who in the hours of mental paucity would lock himself in the bathroom and sing hymns. After that he found he could write. I thought of trying it but, but didn't for two fair reasons. I can't sing and don't know any hymns.

There is a yawning gap still to be filled. Thoughts stray. I am thinking homehow of the night I sat next to Charles Chaplin in a New York cafe. He was alone and nibbling at a housse of chicken. Every eye seemed to be directed his way. Here was a man who had reached the topside of his hour. But he had an epression of sadness. With a cigarette he sat for a long time with unwinking eyes, as though carven. A dramatic critic came by and interrupted the revery for a moment or so. Others came at intervals. Finally he departed in that brisk, mignon manner he has. And at 2 o'clock in the morning in the same neighborhood he was pacing up and down on the sidewalk—hatless and apparently distressed. I sometimes wonder if fame ever really brings happiness.

The happiest fellow I know is a counter man in a Sixth avenue quick lunch. He whistles, sings and laugs at his work. He has a cheery word for every customer. And he is always shouting pleasantries to the cook with the orders. He has his heroes—Babe Ruth and Ring Lardner. He works from 9 at night until 6 in the morning. I asked him once if his temper was ever ruffled. "No," he said. "I love folks too much. Life has been sweet to me. I've got a good job, a wife and two healthy brats and $400 in the bank toward a home."

Famous people are denied the human warmth and personal contact that makes for happiness and content. Nothing seems to me so depressing as an atmosphere of aloofness.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By ETHEL MARSHALL.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Stanley Baldwin, wife of the new prime minister, once again installed in gloomy No. 10 Downing street, is considered one of the most likable of recent premiers' wives.

She has none of the brilliant flare of Mrs. Asquith, nor has she any of Mrs. Lloyd George's Welsh stolidity. But she has a way of making herself liked by all who come in contact with her .

During her first regime at "No. 10" she carried out drastic alterations in the official residence. Thus she already has earned the gratitude of future premiers' wives.

One of the traditions which recent prime ministers have kept up is that of leaving small souvenirs behind them. Mr. Asquith left a pair of antlers in the hall. Lloyd George contributed a silver inkstand, and Mr. Baldwin a small antiue mirror, which he will now use again.

During a recent shopping expedition, Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter, Ishbel, purchased a small revolving bookcase as a silent reminder of the brief Labor regime.

The talk in all the clubs and restaurants is of how the retiring Labor ministers will accommodate themselves to small salaries again, for few of them have private wealth. Some of their salaries will now drop from $25,000 to $3,500 annually.

Ministers' wives will feel the pinch especially, for some of them found the social life connected with their husbands' offices extremely pleasant.

Both of her sons having reached the age when they can safely be left to the care of nurses, Princess Mary is anxious to take part in the fashionable hunts this winter. She is a fine horsewoman; but her husband, Lord Lascelles, doesn't encourage her hunting inclinations.

Lord Lascelles is master of the Bramham Moor Hunt.

The Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe have taken a small place near by, so they can hunt there this winter.

American horsewomen already are in the field. There were several Americans at a recent meet of the Quorn pack.

The Countess of Ancaster, formerly Miss Eloise Breese, of New York, is going to hunt from Grimthorpe castle.

Chick Drexel, of New York and Atlanta, who created a sensation in London by arriving at a fashionable Strand hotel by sailing his yacht Nirvana up the Thames to the back door, has become engaged to Miss Laura Madeleine Tully, better known as Anna Krish, the soprano.

Their marriage will take place shortly, as the bride-to-be has a concert tour to fulfill in America.

Miss Tully recently inherited a huge fortune from her stepfather, who had tobacco estates in Cuba. She is a relative of the Guggenheim family.

Scarcely more than an hour after the Prince of Wales arrived in London from his American tour he went to visit the American ambassador, Mr. Kellogg—a delicate piece of royal tact.

The prince has been seen at several of the hotel cabarets since his return. He called at the Savoy hotel, with a party, at midnight of Guy Fawkes Night and witnessed a special display of fireworks from the roof of the hotel.

Among Americans entertaining at the Savoy the same night was Clarence Mackay, just back from Scotland, whose guests included the new American Consul General and Mrs. Horace Lee Washington.

Princess Mary may visit America next year. She is very anxious to see Canada and, incidentally would probably visit New York.

Housewives in England are considerably worried by the constantly increasing price of tea. As usual, the increase is blamed upon America's greater consumption, due to the effects of prohibition. India and China also report reduced supplies. American consumption has increased by two million pounds during the last year.

The Labor budget's decreased tax on tea reduced the price by eight cents a pound early in the year, but since then the price has been steadily creeping back to the old figure and even higher.

DINNER STORIES

It does not do to become abstracted in the school room. The teacher in a high school class was an ardent billiard player in off hours. One day he said: "Now, we start with this formula."

He took up the pointer and advanced to the blackboard, only to be interrupted by a shout of laughter from the class. In his absence of mind he had first chalked the end of the stick, just as if it had been a billiard cue.

Haskin Letter

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASTING HUMAN LIVES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—A total of 22,600 persons were killed and 678,000 injured in traffic accidents—mostly automobile accidents—in the United States last year, according to the annual report of the secretary of commerce made public today. In that section of the report discussing the elimination of national waste Secretary Hoover says that "the most challenging of all wastes is the waste of human life," and adds:

"There is no more conspicuous example of that wastage in our modern American life than in the mounting surve of traffic accidents."

The department of commerce has been waging a campaign against waste for three years and traffic accidents constitute the latest phase of the problem it has taken up. With the idea of bringing about a better public understanding of the situation, and if possible, finding a remedy for it, Secretary Hoover requested police officials, highway and motor vehicle commissioners, chambers of commerce, automobile associations and manufacturers, safety-first associations, engineering associations, insurance carriers and labor organizations to join in the formation of a number of committees to investigate the whole subject.

These committees are composed of representative men from all sections of the country, and the one on statistics has just brought in the casualty report quoted by the secretary. When all the committees have completed their work it is planned to hold a national conference at which ways and means of dealing with the problem of traffic accidents will be considered. It is the present purpose to have the conference in this city some time in December.

No one suggests that traffic accidents can be wholly eliminated, but it is believed that something can be done that will result in a material reduction of the yearly casualty list. The immense economic loss of this wastage of human life is obvious, even though it cannot be measured exactly in dollars and cents.

WASTES ARE NUMEROUS

"We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our industry and commerce of any nation in the world," says Secretary Hoover. "Yet our economic machine is far from perfect. Wastes are legion.

"There are wastes which arise from wide-spread unemployment during depressions, and from speculation and overproduction in booms; wastes attributed to labor turn-over and the stress of labor conflicts; wastes due to intermittent and seasonal production, as in the coal and construction industries; vast wastes from strictures in commerce due to inadeuate transportation, such as the lack of sufficient terminals; wastes caused by excessive variations in products; wastes in materials, arising from lack of efficient processes; wastes by fire, and wastes of human life.

"Against these and other wastes the department, acting always in co-operation with the industries, has for the past three years developed an increasingly definite program. As these manifold activities of the department are based upon co-operation with industry and commerce, none of them leads to paternalistic ends."

Pointing out that the American standard of living is the product of high wages to producers and low prices to consumers, Mr. Hoover says that the road to national progress lies in increasing real wages through proportio nately lower prices, and that the one and only way to accomplish this is to improve methods and processes and to eliminate waste. Regulation and laws are of but minor effect on these things, he says, but by well-directed economic forces, by co-operation in the community, we cannot only maintain American standards of living we can raise them.

The accomplishments of the governmental program have been notably in the fields of unemployment, seasonal construction, coal, super-power, standardization, simplified practice, co-operative marketing, and the reduction of housing costs.

THE BALANCE WHEEL OF INDUSTRY

An official survey of the seasonal operation in the construction industries showed conclusively that custom, not climate, is mainly responsible for the seasonal ups and downs in building, and that these evils are largely unnecessary and can be eliminated.

"For the most type of construction it is now possible to build the year around in all parts of the United States," says the report. "The elimination of these wastes would strengthen the entire business structure, for construction is the balance wheel of American industry. The value of yearly construction in the United States is more than five billion dollars. If building falls off, there is always a slackening in many other lines of industry, resulting in unemployment, decreased purchasing power of employes and further depression."

Educating the consumer to the wisdom and need of summer storage, eliminating car shortage and otherwise improving transportation, and the establishment of industrial peace in the coal industry have resulted, during the past year as compared with 1920, in a saving to the consumer of about one billion dollars, "which must be reflected in decreasing costs of production in every line of industry and commerce."

Illustrative of how waste is eliminated through simplified practice the report says that whereas formerly no less than 66 sizes of paving brick were being manufactured and sold, now there are but five varieties. During the last year varieties of files and rasps were simplified from 1,351 to 498; range boilers from 130 to 13; sizes of bed blankets from 78 to 12.

Secretary Hoover defends associations as one of the most important agencies through which the elimination of waste may be promoted, and he says the great mapority of them are not to be condemned because a small minority have in the past been used as cloaks for restraint of trade, controlling distribution and prices.

"The dividing line, however, between what activities are in the public interest and what are not, he says, "is not today clearly defined either by the law or by court decision. In conseuence of recent decisions of the courts many associations are fearful of proceeding with work of vital public importance, and we are losing the value of much admirable activity. At the same time we are keeping alive the possibility of wrongful acts. It is imperative that some definition should be made by which an assurance of legality in proper conduct can be had, and by which illegality or improper conduct may be more vigorously attacked.

"Any collective activity can be used as a smoke screen to cover conspiracy against the public interest, but that is not reason for condemning all collective activities.

"Just because automobiles are sometimes used by bootleggers for the illegal transportation of liquor we do ont prohibit their manufacture or their legitimate use."

Johnnie was gazing at his week-old brother, who lay squealing and yelling in his cot.

"Has he come from Heaven?" inquired Johnnie.

"Yes, dear."

"No wonder they put him out."

"Last night, madam," said the American tourist, "you informed me that the Duke of Wellington once stayed in this hotel. Is it a fact?"

"It is, sir," beamed the landlady, "a solemn fact; He slept in the very room you had last night."

"Was it just the same as it is now?"

"Just the same."

"Same bed in it?"

"The very identical bed."

"And the Duke of Wellington slept in it—he actually slept in it?"

"Ain't that what I'm tellin' ye? He actually slept in the very bed ye 'ad last night!"

"Great Caesar!" exclaimed the tourist. "No wonder they called him the Iron Duke!"

Frederick H. Beasley, of marvelous muscular force, could lift 20 men. A dispatch from Toronto tells of his death, only 28 years old. He had written a book, "Why Athletes Die Young," and then added one to the number of warnings.

A human body has just so much vitality, no more. It can be turned in any direction you please, made to build useless, heavy muscle or used in mental and nrve force. Too much muscular effort deprives vital organs of the strength they need, and the over-developed athlete dies young.

We exercise to cause deep breathing, getting the residual air out of the lungs, to perspire and make the millions of pores do their share of the work, and to keep the body free from stiffness.

Beyond that exercise, for a mature man, is wasted. Much more than that is dangerous.

MODERN RELIGION WANTED

The Rev. Dr. Fosdick says the people need an up-to-date faith. Some of them do but many prefer the most old-fashioned religion. For millions, nothing can take the place of David and Goliath, the fig tree that withered when it was rebuked, or that "great fish," whale, or what you please, throwing Jonah upon the beach.

There are two kinds of religious craving. One kind wants something mysterious, even something of which it can say, "I believe it, because it is impossible."

The other sort of mind demands a religion that adapts itself to the discovery that the earth is round, not suare, with the "four angels standing at the four corners of the earth."

Why not gratify both cravings, old-fashioned, and new-fashioned, without fighting about it? The kind of religion a man wants is the kind that makes him a better man. Let him have it.

Russian bonds sold to American financiers with infantile brains are now worth nothing. This column used to warn Americans against buying such trash.

Are you buying Europe's bonds now? If so, do you expect to get your money back, usurious interest and principal? You probably won't get it.

And write this on your tablets, "the bankers that peddle these bonds to you, are not buying to keep." The take the bonds, hand them to you and keep only their rake-off.

Why should the bonds not be paid?

Why is Europe demanding a reduction of two-thirds on money lent by this government?

Bacause of the unusual circumstances of the loans.

Americans are getting Europe's bonds, paying 7 per cent interest, sold at 94 cents on the dollar. That means 13 per cent interest the first year. And that is the kind of usury that ought to put the lender in jail.

He won't go to jail, but he'll pay the milder and well established penalty. He won't get his money back.

Usury will be the "unusual circumstances" to be pleaded a little later. Today's bond buyers will be told, first, we'll deduct that 13 per cent you made us pay the first year. That will make the bonds worth 87. Then, as we're entitled to credit at 3½ per cent, we deduct from your claim one-half the 7 per cent paid you plus compound interest. That does not leave much.

Yesterday Mrs. Coolidge christened the ZR-3, changing the great air boat's name to Los Angeles.

In years to come Los Angeles, with fifteen or twenty millions of population, will keep a model of ZR-3 in some museum, and children will see the "tiny little flying machine that used to be called big."

Flying ships will be biult big enough to carry ZR 3 as part of the euipment.

Thanks to the Mellon-Coolidge economy program, the cost of government will be cut below $1,8000,000,000 for next year.

That would seem high to those that once protested against a government spending $1,000,000,000 in two years. But the war has changed all that.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—This is one of those barren days when I can hear the faint rustle of my audience reaching under the seats for their hats. Nothing comes to mind worthy of chronicling after a solid hour of attempting to grab something out of the ether.

Yet I must make the gesture. And fill the space. I am filled with self pity. Everybody else has had a vacation. I never have one. No matter where I happen to be I must do the daily grind. I had rather hoped to be fired by fall.

My mail is also unsuggestive. The skies are adrizzle. A man next door has the whooping cough. And the way he whoops, my dears. Raymond Carroll sends me a photo of himself in front of a Paris cafe. In front of his is planted an aperitif. Business of O-la-la-ing.

The phone rings and a nit-wit inuiries: "Have you ever been goose bit by a mocking bird?" The voice was suspiciously like Verne Porter, editor of the Smart Set. And I replied: "No, but I have heard pheasants sing the mayonnaise." Low comedy.

Across the way in an office there is a man who works all day at a typewriter as though he must do just one more letter and catch a train. He wears a green eye-shade and looks like Calvin Coolidge. An old organ grinder wheezes out a tune at the curb.

On one of the windows in gold letters is "Harley P. Lots—Aluminum Pots." Make your own lyrics. I'm too tired. That fellow is whooping again. The phone rings. And it is a lady bootlegger who is told there is no interest.

For a half hour I have been entertained by tearing the lining out of an old house shoe. At times the strain made me puff, but I have, I must say with due modesty, done a neat job. It was just as fascinating as a loose tooth.

There used to be a writer who in the hours of mental paucity would lock himself in the bathroom and sing hymns. After that he found he could write. I thought of trying it but, but didn't for two fair reasons. I can't sing and don't know any hymns.

There is a yawning gap still to be filled. Thoughts stray. I am thinking homehow of the night I sat next to Charles Chaplin in a New York cafe. He was alone and nibbling at a housse of chicken. Every eye seemed to be directed his way. Here was a man who had reached the topside of his hour. But he had an epression of sadness. With a cigarette he sat for a long time with unwinking eyes, as though carven. A dramatic critic came by and interrupted the revery for a moment or so. Others came at intervals. Finally he departed in that brisk, mignon manner he has. And at 2 o'clock in the morning in the same neighborhood he was pacing up and down on the sidewalk—hatless and apparently distressed. I sometimes wonder if fame ever really brings happiness.

The happiest fellow I know is a counter man in a Sixth avenue quick lunch. He whistles, sings and laugs at his work. He has a cheery word for every customer. And he is always shouting pleasantries to the cook with the orders. He has his heroes—Babe Ruth and Ring Lardner. He works from 9 at night until 6 in the morning. I asked him once if his temper was ever ruffled. "No," he said. "I love folks too much. Life has been sweet to me. I've got a good job, a wife and two healthy brats and $400 in the bank toward a home."

Famous people are denied the human warmth and personal contact that makes for happiness and content. Nothing seems to me so depressing as an atmosphere of aloofness.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By ETHEL MARSHALL.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Stanley Baldwin, wife of the new prime minister, once again installed in gloomy No. 10 Downing street, is considered one of the most likable of recent premiers' wives.

She has none of the brilliant flare of Mrs. Asquith, nor has she any of Mrs. Lloyd George's Welsh stolidity. But she has a way of making herself liked by all who come in contact with her.

During her first regime at "No. 10" she carried out drastic alterations in the official residence. Thus she already has earned the gratitude of future premiers' wives.

One of the traditions which recent prime ministers have kept up is that of leaving small souvenirs behind them. Mr. Asquith left a pair of antlers in the hall. Lloyd George contributed a silver inkstand, and Mr. Baldwin a small antiue mirror, which he will now use again.

During a recent shopping expedition, Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter, Ishbel, purchased a small revolving bookcase as a silent reminder of the brief Labor regime.

The talk in all the clubs and restaurants is of how the retiring Labor ministers will accommodate themselves to small salaries again, for few of them have private wealth. Some of their salaries will now drop from $25,000 to $3,500 annually.

Ministers' wives will feel the pinch especially, for some of them found the social life connected with their husbands' offices extremely pleasant.

Both of her sons having reached the age when they can safely be left to the care of nurses, Princess Mary is anxious to take part in the fashionable hunts this winter. She is a fine horsewoman; but her husband, Lord Lascelles, doesn't encourage her hunting inclinations.

Lord Lascelles is master of the Bramham Moor Hunt.

The Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe have taken a small place near by, so they can hunt there this winter.

American horsewomen already are in the field. There were several Americans at a recent meet of the Quorn pack.

The Countess of Ancaster, formerly Miss Eloise Breese, of New York, is going to hunt from Grimthorpe castle.

Chick Drexel, of New York and Atlanta, who created a sensation in London by arriving at a fashionable Strand hotel by sailing his yacht Nirvana up the Thames to the back door, has become engaged to Miss Laura Madeleine Tully, better known as Anna Krish, the soprano.

Their marriage will take place shortly, as the bride-to-be has a concert tour to fulfill in America.

Miss Tully recently inherited a huge fortune from her stepfather, who had tobacco estates in Cuba. She is a relative of the Guggenheim family.

Scarcely more than an hour after the Prince of Wales arrived in London from his American tour he went to visit the American ambassador, Mr. Kellogg—a delicate piece of royal tact.

The prince has been seen at several of the hotel cabarets since his return. He called at the Savoy hotel, with a party, at midnight of Guy Fawkes Night and witnessed a special display of fireworks from the roof of the hotel.

Among Americans entertaining at the Savoy the same night was Clarence Mackay, just back from Scotland, whose guests included the new American Consul General and Mrs. Horace Leo Washington.

Princess Mary may visit America next year. She is very anxious to see Canada and, incidentally would probably visit New York.

Housewives in England are considerably worried by the constantly increasing price of tea. As usual, the increase is blamed upon America's greater consumption, due to the effects of prohibition. India and China also report reduced supplies. American consumption has increased by two million pounds during the last year.

The Labor budget's decreased tax on tea reduced the price by eight cents a pound early in the year, but since then the price has been steadily creeping back to the old figure and even higher.

DINNER STORIES

It does not do to become abstracted in the school room. The teacher in a high school class was an ardent billiard player in off hours. One day he said: "Now, we start with this formula."

He took up the pointer and advanced to the blackboard, only to be interrupted by a shout of laughter from the class. In his absence of mind he had first chalked the end of the stick, just as if it had been a billiard cue.

Johnnie was gazing at his week-old brother, who lay squealing and yelling in his cot.

"Has he come from Heaven?" inquired Johnnie.

"Yes, dear."

"No wonder they put him out."

"Last night, madam," said the American tourist, "you informed me that the Duke of Wellington once stayed in this hotel. Is it a fact?"

"It is, sir," beamed the landlady, "a solemn fact; He slept in the very room you had last night."

"Was it just the same as it is now?"

"Just the same."

"Same bed in it?"

"The very identical bed."

"And the Duke of Wellington slept in it—he actually slept in it?"

"Ain't that what I'm tellin' ye? He actually slept in the very bed ye 'ad last night!"

"Great Caesar!" exclaimed the tourist. "No wonder they called him the Iron Duke!"

WASTING HUMAN LIVES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—A total of 22,600 persons were killed and 678,000 injured in traffic accidents—mostly automobile accidents—in the United States last year, according to the annual report of the secretary of commerce made public today. In that section of the report discussing the elimination of national waste Secretary Hoover says that "the most challenging of all wastes is the waste of human life," and adds:

"There is no more conspicuous example of that wastage in our modern American life than in the mounting surve of traffic accidents."

The department of commerce has been waging a campaign against waste for three years and traffic accidents constitute the latest phase of the problem it has taken up. With the idea of bringing about a better public understanding of the situation, and if possible, finding a remedy for it, Secretary Hoover requested police officials, highway and motor vehicle commissioners, chambers of commerce, automobile associations and manufacturers, safety-first associations, engineering associations, insurance carriers and labor organizations to join in the formation of a number of committees to investigate the whole subject.

These committees are composed of representative men from all sections of the country, and the one on statistics has just brought in the casualty report quoted by the secretary. When all the committees have completed their work it is planned to hold a national conference at which ways and means of dealing with the problem of traffic accidents will be considered. It is the present purpose to have the conference in this city some time in December.

No one suggests that traffic accidents can be wholly eliminated, but it is believed that something can be done that will result in a material reduction of the yearly casualty list. The immense economic loss of this wastage of human life is obvious, even though it cannot be measured exactly in dollars and cents.

WASTES ARE NUMEROUS

"We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our industry and commerce of any nation in the world," says Secretary Hoover. "Yet our economic machine is far from perfect. Wastes are legion.

"There are wastes which arise from wide-spread unemployment during depressions, and from speculation and overproduction in booms; wastes attributed to labor turn-over and the stress of labor conflicts; wastes due to intermittent and seasonal production, as in the coal and construction industries; vast wastes from strictures in commerce due to inadeuate transportation, such as the lack of sufficient terminals; wastes caused by excessive variations in products; wastes in materials, arising from lack of efficient processes; wastes by fire, and wastes of human life.

"Against these and other wastes the department, acting always in co-operation with the industries, has for the past three years developed an increasingly definite program. As these manifold activities of the department are based upon co-operation with industry and commerce, none of them leads to paternalistic ends."

Pointing out that the American standard of living is the product of high wages to producers and low prices to consumers, Mr. Hoover says that the road to national progress lies in increasing real wages through proportio nately lower prices, and that the one and only way to accomplish this is to improve methods and processes and to eliminate waste. Regulation and laws are of but minor effect on these things, he says, but by well-directed economic forces, by co-operation in the community, we cannot only maintain American standards of living we can raise them.

The accomplishments of the governmental program have been notably in the fields of unemployment, seasonal construction, coal, super-power, standardization, simplified practice, co-operative marketing, and the reduction of housing costs.

THE BALANCE WHEEL OF INDUSTRY

An official survey of the seasonal operation in the construction industries showed conclusively that custom, not climate, is mainly responsible for the seasonal ups and downs in building, and that these evils are largely unnecessary and can be eliminated.

"For the most type of construction it is now possible to build the year around in all parts of the United States," says the report. "The elimination of these wastes would strengthen the entire business structure, for construction is the balance wheel of American industry. The value of yearly construction in the United States is more than five billion dollars. If building falls off, there is always a slackening in many other lines of industry, resulting in unemployment, decreased purchasing power of employes and further depression."

Educating the consumer to the wisdom and need of summer storage, eliminating car shortage and otherwise improving transportation, and the establishment of industrial peace in the coal industry have resulted, during the past year as compared with 1920, in a saving to the consumer of about one billion dollars, "which must be reflected in decreasing costs of production in every line of industry and commerce."

Illustrative of how waste is eliminated through simplified practice the report says that whereas formerly no less than 66 sizes of paving brick were being manufactured and sold, now there are but five varieties. During the last year varieties of files and rasps were simplified from 1,351 to 498; range boilers from 130 to 13; sizes of bed blankets from 78 to 12.

Secretary Hoover defends associations as one of the most important agencies through which the elimination of waste may be promoted, and he says the great mapority of them are not to be condemned because a small minority have in the past been used as cloaks for restraint of trade, controlling distribution and prices.

"The dividing line, however, between what activities are in the public interest and what are not, he says, "is not today clearly defined either by the law or by court decision. In conseuence of recent decisions of the courts many associations are fearful of proceeding with work of vital public importance, and we are losing the value of much admirable activity. At the same time we are keeping alive the possibility of wrongful acts. It is imperative that some definition should be made by which an assurance of legality in proper conduct can be had, and by which illegality or improper conduct may be more vigorously attacked.

"Any collective activity can be used as a smoke screen to cover conspiracy against the public interest, but that is not reason for condemning all collective activities.

"Just because automobiles are sometimes used by bootleggers for the illegal transportation of liquor we do ont prohibit their manufacture or their legitimate use."

The Business Cycle

Business experts are pretty well agreed that the nation is entering upon a new business cycle. The present year, as they see it, has marked the end of the last cycle, the slump and the period of readjustment. Now begins the up-turn. They do not promise any "boom" remarkable in intensity or duration, but they believe there is now beginning a period of general and prosperous business activity which will last through the next year, at least.

This is a cold, scientific conclusion of level headed observers. Recent Wall Street activity, with a buyers' market and records broken on the stock exchange, is merely a more temperamental manifestation of the same conclusion.

The renewed activity comes, the observers say, because the country is ready for it. Conditions are right, and there is nothing, political or otherwise, likely to interefre.

The November bulletin of one of the country's leading banks, accepting this favorable opinion, pays its respects to three obstacles which loom large in the minds of pessimists.

The first of these is the fear of greatly increased competition from abroad, as Europe recovers economically. The bank discounts this fear on the ground that as foreign nations increase their outputs of manufactured goods, they also become better consumers for our raw materials and many of our manufactured goods—also better customers for their own products.

The second obstacle feared, that of high wages, is considered largely offset by the high purchasing power of the American people which is made possible by the high wages.

The third obstacle, a belief that American industries are over-developed and over-expanded, is pronounced true only in exceptional cases. Industry in general seems sure to be fully occupied.

Stolen Water

Chicago is preparing to renew its fight in congress for diverting still more water from Lake Michigan, through its drainage canal. Other cities on the Great Lakes are preparing to resist that project more vigorously than ever.

The other cities protest that Chicago is already shamelessly taking more water than the law allows or than is good for the Great Lakes and the populous region they serve. The levels of all the lakes except Superior have been lowered already to a point that cripples navigation and necessitates the spending of millions to deepen channels and dredge harbors.

Moreover, they say, Chicago, under the guise of a mere sanitary drainage project, is also using for power purposes water that does not belong to her, at the expense of American and Canadian cities.

As for the "Lake-to-Gulf barge canal," the critics question the sincerity of that proposal, on the ground that such a volume of water as Chicago demands would make canal transportation impractical.

The people of the Illinois river valley are adding their protest against the "great open sewer" inflicted on them by the metropolis.

Chicago, instead of robbing the Great Lakes, may yet be obliged to dispose of her sewage at her own expense, in sanitary ways, as other cities are.

Ban On Firearms

A big Chicago mail order house has discontinued the sale of all forms of firearms. This is a big and praiseworthy contribution to public safety. It has been recognized for years that the indiscriminate sale of pistols was a boon to criminals and a prolific cause of fatal accidents. There would be no "crime wave' if criminals had no "guns," and it was always easy for them to get weapons from mail order houses when, for any reason, they could not or did not care to buy them locally. With such sources closed to them, it will be easier for states and cities to limit crime by controlling their own arms traffic.

Other mail order houses should follow this example, and probably will. Like the company in question, they should "feel that the moral side of all public questions is the right side," and also that "it is good business." But the evil will never be adequately dealt with until the government regulates the distribution of firearms.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

POOR QUINEA PIGS

To prove that Mrs. Sheatsley did not crawl into her furnace, shut the door after her and burn herself to death, they have burned live guinea pigs in that same furnace.

Examination of the burned guinea pigs' lungs is supposed to prove for a future jury trial, that the clergyman's wife had been killed before she was burned. If she was dead, when burned, she could not have crawled through a furnace door 14 inches square, to burn herself.

The fact that her skull was broken in several places before she was burned helps to weaken the interesting suicide theory.

But what about the guinea pigs, and justice to them. The sparrows, worth less than a farthing each, are all counted, and does anyone doubt that a guinea pig is as important as a sparrow? How does the machinery of justice excuse burning those little guinea pigs alive?

$2,500,000 AND $60,000

You could not call this a cheap country, but we charge reasonable prices for our citizens. When a British officer, Stack, the sirdar, was killed by an Egyptian mob, England immediately collected two and a half million dollars, which will help solace the murdered man's family.

When Imbrie, United States consul, was murdered by a Persian mob, this nation politely requested an allowance of $60,000. A British sirdar is more impressive, if you like, than a plain American consul. But is the difference eual to the difference between $60,000 and $2,500,000?

TOO MUCH MUSCLE IS BAD

Don't try to develop unnatural physical strength. In the first place it is bad for the health. In the second place, vitality used up by over-developed muscles is taken from the brain, which is more important in modern days than muscle.

Frederick H. Beasley, of marvelous muscular force, could lift 20 men. A dispatch from Toronto tells of his death, only 28 years old. He had written a book, "Why Athletes Die Young," and then added one to the number of warnings.

For a half hour I have been entertained by tearing the lining out of an old house shoe. At times the strain made me puff, but I have, I must say with due modesty, done a neat job. It was just as fascinating as a loose tooth.

There used to be a writer who in the hours of mental paucity would lock himself in the bathroom and sing hymns. After that he found he could write. I thought of trying it but, but didn't for two fair reasons. I can't sing and don't know any hymns.

There is a yawning gap still to be filled. Thoughts stray. I am thinking homehow of the night I sat next to Charles Chaplin in a New York cafe. He was alone and nibbling at a housse of chicken. Every eye seemed to be directed his way. Here was a man who had reached the topside of his hour. But he had an epression of sadness. With a cigarette he sat for a long time with unwinking eyes, as though carven. A dramatic critic came by and interrupted the revery for a moment or so. Others came at intervals. Finally he departed in that brisk, mignon manner he has. And at 2 o'clock in the morning in the same neighborhood he was pacing up and down on the sidewalk—hatless and apparently distressed. I sometimes wonder if fame ever really brings happiness.

The happiest fellow I know is a counter man in a Sixth avenue quick lunch. He whistles, sings and laugs at his work. He has a cheery word for every customer. And he is always shouting pleasantries to the cook with the orders. He has his heroes—Babe Ruth and Ring Lardner. He works from 9 at night until 6 in the morning. I asked him once if his temper was ever ruffled. "No," he said. "I love folks too much. Life has been sweet to me. I've got a good job, a wife and two healthy brats and $400 in the bank toward a home."

Famous people are denied the human warmth and personal contact that makes for happiness and content. Nothing seems to me so depressing as an atmosphere of aloofness.

NEWSY GOSSIP OF BIG CITIES

By ETHEL MARSHALL.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Stanley Baldwin, wife of the new prime minister, once again installed in gloomy No. 10 Downing street, is considered one of the most likable of recent premiers' wives.

She has none of the brilliant flare of Mrs. Asquith, nor has she any of Mrs. Lloyd George's Welsh stolidity. But she has a way of making herself liked by all who come in contact with her.

During her first regime at "No. 10" she carried out drastic alterations in the official residence. Thus she already has earned the gratitude of future premiers' wives.

One of the traditions which recent prime ministers have kept up is that of leaving small souvenirs behind them. Mr. Asquith left a pair of antlers in the hall. Lloyd George contributed a silver inkstand, and Mr. Baldwin a small antiue mirror, which he will now use again.

During a recent shopping expedition, Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter, Ishbel, purchased a small revolving bookcase as a silent reminder of the brief Labor regime.

The talk in all the clubs and restaurants is of how the retiring Labor ministers will accommodate themselves to small salaries again, for few of them have private wealth. Some of their salaries will now drop from $25,000 to $3,500 annually.

Ministers' wives will feel the pinch especially, for some of them found the social life connected with their husbands' offices extremely pleasant.

Both of her sons having reached the age when they can safely be left to the care of nurses, Princess Mary is anxious to take part in the fashionable hunts this winter. She is a fine horsewoman; but her husband, Lord Lascelles, doesn't encourage her hunting inclinations.

Lord Lascelles is master of the Bramham Moor Hunt.

The Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe have taken a small place near by, so they can hunt there this winter.

American horsewomen already are in the field. There were several Americans at a recent meet of the Quorn pack.

The Countess of Ancaster, formerly Miss Eloise Breese, of New York, is going to hunt from Grimthorpe castle.

Chick Drexel, of New York and Atlanta, who created a sensation in London by arriving at a fashionable Strand hotel by sailing his yacht Nirvana up the Thames to the back door, has become engaged to Miss Laura Madeleine Tully, better known as Anna Krish, the soprano.

Their marriage will take place shortly, as the bride-to-be has a concert tour to fulfill in America.

Miss Tully recently inherited a huge fortune from her stepfather, who had tobacco estates in Cuba. She is a relative of the Guggenheim family.

Scarcely more than an hour after the Prince of Wales arrived in London from his American tour he went to visit the American ambassador, Mr. Kellogg—a delicate piece of royal tact.

The prince has been seen at several of the hotel cabarets since his return. He called at the Savoy hotel, with a party, at midnight of Guy Fawkes Night and witnessed a special display of fireworks from the roof of the hotel.

Among Americans entertaining at the Savoy the same night was Clarence Mackay, just back from Scotland, whose guests included the new American Consul General and Mrs. Horace Lee Washington.

Princess Mary may visit America next year. She is very anxious to see Canada and, incidentally would probably visit New York.

Housewives in England are considerably worried by the constantly increasing price of tea. As usual, the increase is blamed upon America's greater consumption, due to the effects of prohibition. India and China also report reduced supplies. American consumption has increased by two million pounds during the last year.

The Labor budget's decreased tax on tea reduced the price by eight cents a pound early in the year, but since then the price has been steadily creeping back to the old figure and even higher.

DINNER STORIES

It does not do to become abstracted in the school room. The teacher in a high school class was an ardent billiard player in off hours. One day he said: "Now, we start with this formula."

He took up the pointer and advanced to the blackboard, only to be interrupted by a shout of laughter from the class. In his absence of mind he had first chalked the end of the stick, just as if it had been a billiard cue.

WASTING HUMAN LIVES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—A total of 22,600 persons were killed and 678,000 injured in traffic accidents—mostly automobile accidents—in the United States last year, according to the annual report of the secretary of commerce made public today. In that section of the report discussing the elimination of national waste Secretary Hoover says that "the most challenging of all wastes is the waste of human life," and adds:

"There is no more conspicuous example of that wastage in our modern American life than in the mounting surve of traffic accidents."

The department of commerce has been waging a campaign against waste for three years and traffic accidents constitute the latest phase of the problem it has taken up. With the idea of bringing about a better public understanding of the situation, and if possible, finding a remedy for it, Secretary Hoover reuested police officials, highway and motor vehicle commissioners, chambers of commerce, automobile associations and manufacturers, safety-first associations, engineering associations, insurance carriers and labor organizations to join in the formation of a number of committees to investigate the whole subject.

These committees are composed of representative men from all sections of the country, and the one on statistics has just brought in the casualty report quoted by the secretary. When all the committees have completed their work it is planned to hold a national conference at which ways and means of dealing with the problem of traffic accidents will be considered. It is the present purpose to have the conference in this city some time in December.

No one suggests that traffic accidents can be wholly eliminated, but it is believed that something can be done that will result in a material reduction of the yearly casualty list. The immense economic loss of this wastage of human life is obvious, even though it cannot be measured exactly in dollars and cents.

WASTES ARE NUMEROUS

"We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our industry and commerce of any nation in the world," says Secretary Hoover. "Yet our economic machine is far from perfect. Wastes are legion.

"There are wastes which arise from wide-spread unemployment during depressions, and from speculation and overproduction in booms; wastes attributed to labor turn-over and the stress of labor conflicts; wastes due to intermittent and seasonal production, as in the coal and construction industries; vast wastes from strictures in commerce due to inadeuate transportation, such as the lack of sufficient terminals; wastes caused by excessive variations in products; wastes in materials, arising from lack of efficient processes; wastes by fire, and wastes of human life.

"Against these and other wastes the department, acting always in co-operation with the industries, has for the past three years developed an increasingly definite program. As these manifold activities of the department are based upon co-operation with industry and commerce, none of them leads to paternalistic ends."

Pointing out that the American standard of living is the product of high wages to producers and low prices to consumers, Mr. Hoover says that the road to national progress lies in increasing real wages through proportio nately lower prices, and that the one and only way to accomplish this is to improve methods and processes and to eliminate waste. Regulation and laws are of but minor effect on these things, he says, but by well-directed economic forces, by co-operation in the community, we cannot only maintain American standards of living we can raise them.

The accomplishments of the governmental program have been notably in the fields of unemployment, seasonal construction, coal, super-power, standardization, simplified practice, co-operative marketing, and the reduction of housing costs.

THE BALANCE WHEEL OF INDUSTRY

An official survey of the seasonal operation in the construction industries showed conclusively that custom, not climate, is mainly responsible for the seasonal ups and downs in building, and that these evils are largely unnecessary and can be eliminated.

"For the most type of construction it is now possible to build the year around in all parts of the United States," says the report. "The elimination of these wastes would strengthen the entire business structure, for construction is the balance wheel of American industry. The value of yearly construction in the United States is more than five billion dollars. If building falls off, there is always a slackening in many other lines of industry, resulting in unemployment, decreased purchasing power of employes and further depression."

Educating the consumer to the wisdom and need of summer storage, eliminating car shortage and otherwise improving transportation, and the establishment of industrial peace in the coal industry have resulted, during the past year as compared with 1920, in a saving to the consumer of about one billion dollars, "which must be reflected in decreasing costs of production in every line of industry and commerce."

Illustrative of how waste is eliminated through simplified practice the report says that whereas formerly no less than 66 sizes of paving brick were being manufactured and sold, now there are but five varieties. During the last year varieties of files and rasps were simplified from 1,351 to 498; range boilers from 130 to 13; sizes of bed blankets from 78 to 12.

Secretary Hoover defends associations as one of the most important agencies through which the elimination of waste may be promoted, and he says the great mapority of them are not to be condemned because a small minority have in the past been used as cloaks for restraint of trade, controlling distribution and prices.

"The dividing line, however, between what activities are in the public interest and what are not, he says, "is not today clearly defined either by the law or by court decision. In conseuence of recent decisions of the courts many associations are fearful of proceeding with work of vital public importance, and we are losing the value of much admirable activity. At the same time we are keeping alive the possibility of wrongful acts. It is imperative that some definition should be made by which an assurance of legality in proper conduct can be had, and by which illegality or improper conduct may be more vigorously attacked.

"Any collective activity can be used as a smoke screen to cover conspiracy against the public interest, but that is not reason for condemning all collective activities.

"Just because automobiles are sometimes used by bootleggers for the illegal transportation of liquor we do ont prohibit their manufacture or their legitimate use."

Johnnie was gazing at his week-old brother, who lay squealing and yelling in his cot.

"Has he come from Heaven?" inquired Johnnie.

"Yes, dear."

"No wonder they put him out."

"Last night, madam," said the American tourist, "you informed me that the Duke of Wellington once stayed in this hotel. Is it a fact?"

"It is, sir," beamed the landlady, "a solemn fact; He slept in the very room you had last night."

"Was it just the same as it is now?"

"Just the same."

"Same bed in it?"

"The very identical bed."

"And the Duke of Wellington slept in it—he actually slept in it?"

"Ain't that what I'm tellin' ye? He actually slept in the very bed ye 'ad last night!"

"Great Caesar!" exclaimed the tourist. "No wonder they called him the Iron Duke!"

STATE ROAD LAWS TO BE ENFORCED

More strict enforcement of the road laws of West Virginia will be made during the next few weeks than ever before, according to word issued by Colonel Jackson Arnold of the West Virginia state police. He has sent word to every magistrate in the state to co-operate in this important move, and asks that the laws be strictly interpreted.

This action has been taken in the interests of the safety of the law abiding drivers, as well as the pedestrians, because the superintendent asserts there isn't any other law on the statute so often evaded as the road law.

According to the troopers, the people who deal in motor cars continue to lead the van of those who "honor in the breach" the various rules of the road. The superintendent and Corporal "Bob" Martin recently arrested R. L. Raymer, an auto dealer of Weston, on a charge of lending a dealer's license to an individual not for the purpose of sale or exchange of a car."

They offer original creations in vocal arrangement, with rythme and tonal effect that is quite electrifying, and produce each number with the skill, expression and attack that stamps them as artists who understand both classic and modern jazz, and its great possibilities in the accomplishment of big things in the world of modern jazz.

The manager of the Ceramic feels that his patrons will be well pleased with his selection, and is quite confident The Fore Girls will maintain the musical pace that has been set by the best of them in East Liverpool and create as much of a stir in enthusiasm, in spite of their sex.

Portable Schools.

LIMA—Action of the board of education in permitting children who reach the age of 6 years, between December 1 and July 1, to start in the first grade of school at the beginning of the second semester, January 19, will necessitate installation of four portable school houses here, it was announced today. The portable school houses are to be equipped with a separate heating apparatus and have ample means of ventilation. Definite action will be taken on the matter by the board of education at its next meeting it was said.

The doctor would say:

SHAVINGS AND SAWDUST FOUND IN DR. BIEDERWOLF'S TABERNACLE

The final public meeting of the union revival will be at the tabernacle on Monday night when the big 500-voice choir will give a sacred concert. A big audience is assured. Mr. McEwan will tell of his experiences that took him to the gospel platform from the vaudeville stage. A special program of duets, solos and other accompanying features have been prepared for the occasion.

More sawdust has been scattered about the aisles for the final services yet to be held at the big auditorium, artisularly in front of the platform, the previously laid shavings have been well tramped down. The addition accordingly made a considerable change for the better.

The third rain of the campaign was encountered on Friday night. This followed a fall of snow and the Ohio valley slush of the winter season was the result. Despite all this a big audience congregated in the tabernacle for the night service.

Miss Davis of the evangelistic party was presented a huge snowball with her gift of a parasol on Friday night. She was given a fine opportunity for witnessing a fall of "the beautiful" on her way to the tabernacle, her second time doing so.

Mrs. M. A. Martin of Pittsburgh, associated with numerous religious publications and who was formerly connected with the late J. Wilbur Chapman, arrived in East Liverpool on Friday to attend the closing of the campaign. She spent the initial week of the revival here and has followed its progress with interest in the interim since her departure. Mrs. Martin is greatly interested in the laymen's movement in Pittsburgh and was the liaison between those in charge of the departure there and the leaders in the proposed work here. She is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Faulk of Sixth street.

As the result of high wind all Scotland was completely cut off from telephonic communication with London for an entire night last September.

SHAVINGS AND SAWDUST FOUND IN DR. BIEDERWOLF'S TABERNACLE

The final public meeting of the union revival will be at the tabernacle on Monday night when the big 500-voice choir will give a sacred concert. A big audience is assured. Mr. McEwan will tell of his experiences that took him to the gospel platform from the vaudeville stage. Miss Davis of the evangelistic party was presented a huge snowball with her gift of a parasol on Friday night. She was given a fine opportunity for witnessing a fall of "the beautiful" on her way to the tabernacle, her second time doing so.

Mrs. M. A. Martin of Pittsburgh, associated with numerous religious publications and who was formerly connected with the late J. Wilbur Chapman, arrived in East Liverpool on Friday to attend the closing of the campaign. She spent the initial week of the revival here and has followed its progress with interest in the interim since her departure. Mrs. Martin is greatly interested in the laymen's movment in Pittsburgh and was the liaison between those in charge of the departure there and the leaders in the proposed work here. MME. CLAUDIA MUZIO, SOPRANO, APPEARS IN OPERA HERE DEC. 19

Second Concert of Civic Music Association Series Here Will be Given in Ceramic Theatre.

Mme. Claudia Muzio, prima donna soprano, formerly of the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera companies, will appear at the Ceramic theatre on Friday, Dec. 19, in the second concert of the series to be presented under auspices of the East Liverpool Civic Music association.

Miss Muzio, who is regarded as one of the big artists in the concert world, was born in Italy. When she was two years of age, her father took her to London where he was assistant stage manager at the Covent Garden theatre. There she often listened to the great singers in rehearsal as well as in performance.

A few years later her father came to New York, where he worked as an assistant stage manager for the Metropolitan and Manhattan Opera companies. Claudia, at this age, wanted to sing, but her father, realizing the sweet tones in her voice, refused to permit her to take lessons. She was given a harp instead.

At the age of 16 years, the future star was taken to Italy by her parents and while abroad she began her singing career. She studied under Mme. Casaloni in Turin and under Mme. Viviano in Milan, both famous sopranos in their day. Her progress was rapid and after a period of serious study she made her debut in Milan and later sang at the Covent Garden in London.

In 1916, she made her debut in America. She also scored triumphs in the finest opera houses in Europe and South America, taking dramatic soprano parts in "Aida," "L'Amore dei Tre Re," "Pagliacci," "Monna Vanna," and "La Prophete." It was not until last season that audiences in the central west had an opportunity to hear her. During her recent engagement with the Chicago Opera company she scored one of the biggest personal triumphs in opera records. After the eastern tour, Madame Muzio sang in the opera houses in Paris and Monte Carlo and then filled an engagement in Buenos Aires.

The third and final concert to be presented by the Civic Music Association, this season, is booked for Feb- [illegible] when Charles Marshall, celebrated American tenor, will appear [illegible] city.

The leaders of the music association have issued a statement, urging members to avoid crowding at the theatre doors at the next concert. It was pointed out that many patrons in the initial concert were made uncomfortable because of the pushing in an effort to get into the playhouse. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,500, while the music association has just 1,200 members, making seats available for all.

MME. CLAUDIA MUZIO, SOPRANO, APPEARS IN OPERA HERE DEC. 19

Second Concert of Civic Music Association Series Here Will be Given in Ceramic Theatre.

Mme. Claudia Muzio, prima donna soprano, formerly of the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera companies, will appear at the Ceramic theatre on Friday, Dec. 19, in the second concert of the series to be presented under auspices of the East Liverpool Civic Music association.

Miss Muzio, who is regarded as one of the big artists in the concert world, was born in Italy. When she was two years of age, her father took her to London where he was assistant stage manager at the Covent Garden theatre. There she often listened to the great singers in rehearsal as well as in performance.

A few years later her father came to New York, where he worked as an assistant stage manager for the Metropolitan and Manhattan Opera companies. Claudia, at this age, wanted to sing, but her father, realizing the sweet tones in her voice, refused to permit her to take lessons. She was given a harp instead.

At the age of 16 years, the future star was taken to Italy by her parents and while abroad she began her singing career. She studied under Mme. Casaloni in Turin and under Mme. Viviano in Milan, both famous sopranos in their day. Her progress was rapid and after a period of serious study she made her debut in Milan and later sang at the Covent Garden in London.

In 1916, she made her debut in America. She also scored triumphs in the finest opera houses in Europe and South America, taking dramatic soprano parts in "Aida," "L'Amore dei Tre Re," "Pagliacci," "Monna Vanna," and "La Prophete." It was not until last season that audiences in the central west had an opportunity to hear her. During her recent engagement with the Chicago Opera company she scored one of the biggest personal triumphs in opera records. After the eastern tour, Madame Muzio sang in the opera houses in Paris and Monte Carlo and then filled an engagement in Buenos Aires.

The third and final concert to be presented by the Civic Music Association, this season, is booked for Feb- [illegible] when Charles Marshall, celebrated American tenor, will ap- [illegible] city.

The leaders of the music association have issued a statement, urging members to avoid crowding at the theatre doors at the next concert. It was pointed out that many patrons in the initial concert were made uncomfortable because of the pushing in an effort to get into the playhouse. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,500, while the music association has [illegible] members, making seats available for all.

Red Lights Best, Says Bureau of Standards; Ends Controversy

WASHINGTON.—To settle the question of which lights are most easily distinguished at a distance and to bring about standardization of colors for traffic signals, the Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce, has conducted exhaustive tests.

"Red signal lights are easily distinguished from other colors at a distance and require the lowest intensity for unmistakable recognition" the report of the bureau sets forth. "Green signals come second on the list of colored lights easy to identify."

What the Sunday School Is Studying

STUDYING.
Are We Good Neighbors?
The Good Samaritan.
Luke 10:26-37.
International Lesson for November 30
By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Many of the most beautiful words and deeds of Jesus were drawn out of him by his enemies. The parable of the Good Samaritan is one of the finest literary and moral jewels of the New Testament, and it was occasioned by the artful attack of a scribe or lawyer. Never did Jesus show up to better advantage than in these dialectical efforts of his enemies to catch Him in a trap, and this parable is the product of the keenest and subtlest of these hostile schemes.

A Sinister Question.

The lawyer fenced for a good position with his question: "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" The question had good points, for it strikes into one of the greatest issues of life and yet it was spoiled and poisoned by its sinister purpose. He "tempted" Jesus, meaning that he was not a sincere inquirer for truths, but was bent on entrapping Him. He was seeking, not instruction, but controversy and partisan victory. Everything depends on the purpose for which and the spirit in which we ask a question. If we are sinners seeking after truth we shall find the way; but if we are trying in any way to ensnare others, if we only want to prove that we are right and they wrong, or to get advantage of them in some way then we are likely to get lost ourselves. Let us ask great questions as honest inquirers, and the answer will be forthcoming and we shall find eternal life.

A Lawyer Sent to the Law.

Jesus answered the lawyer's question by asking another. The Great Teacher was a master of dialectics, and no captious critic ever tried to catch Him without being caught himself. "What is written in the law?" quietly inquired Jesus of his questioner. The point is plain and sharp. The lawyer was referred to the law. He was shown to be ignorant of his own profession and sent back to his own book. He did not need to ask this question, for he already had means of answering it. It was not more light he needed, but more use of the light he had. If we knew what is written in our Bibles we should be saved from many questions and perplexities. We are often searching for truth far off when the commandment is nigh us, even in our hearts. There is enough written for us already, and we do not need more light, but a clearer eye with which to see the light we have.

A Second Question.

The consistent course for the lawyer to have followed, had he been a sincere inquirer, owuld have been to begin the practice of his own profession and go back to his book. But this was not the point he had in view, and he now gave another twist to the argument. But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, "And who is my neighbor?" This was onther unnecessary question with a wrong motive. He was trying "to justify himself," and this was the poisoned point his question. Of how many excuses and subterfuges and lies is self-justification the root and purpose? The question was also unnecessary, because his Bible told him this in unmistakenable teaching. The book of Jonah could have answered his question in splendid terms. The question, "Who is my neighbor?" is likely to be the old heresy of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" The man that begins to ask this question has already lost touch with humanity and contracted his vision to a narrow circle. It is this question that splits society into classes and arrays ranks and races against one another.

The Parable.

At this point Jesus introduced his superb parable. The Samaritan put the wounded Jew in his place and treated him as his own self. His own comport was in having the stranger comfortable. His consciousness aws of the other man. This is the essence the gospel and the blood-red heart of of Samaritanism, the very spirit of the cross. This is the wonderful answer Jesus gave to the Jews, holding up before them a despised man of a despised race and religion as an example to them, rebuking their formal hypocrisy and showing them by one counted by them a heretic and heathen what true religion is. Priest and Levite, minister and deacon, the professional religionists had no time or sympathy for a robbed and wounded man of another race; there was no money in his pocket for them and he was not their neighbor. Jesus blew such religion away as hypocritical and contemptible and taught what real religion and true neighborliness are.

The Application.

Having drawn this picture Jesus now submitted to the lawyer which of the three was the true neighbor. The great Teacher made the truth so plain that he was willing to leave the answer to his captious critic himself. And the lawyer answered, "He that shewed mercy on him." Shut up so closely to the truth he could hardly go wrong. Yet Jesus told him nothing that he did not already know. He simply put the case so clearly before him as to draw the truth out of his own knowledge and conscience. The Master's parting word to the lawyer was, "Go and do thou likewise." This was the method and spirit of Jesus, this should be the spirit with which we deal with people of every race and religion. Who is our neighbor? Every human being. That poor man, that tempted man, that black man or that heathen man, that far-of man, he is your neighbor and mine. "Who needs me is my neighbor." The roadsides of life along which we are traveling are lined with those that need our our help, and we have it in our power to put our shoulders under their burdens and help them to healing and life. Only this spirit will save society. The parting word of Jesus to the lawyer is also his word to us, "Go and do thou likewise."

"Sneaking Things."

"Tell me," said a juvenile court judge, "how have you become a thief and a liar?"

"I don't know, judge," said the lad.

"Now be honest and tell me the truth and possibly I will not be so hard on you. Did you ever take something that did not belong to you—or when much younger did you borrow something without permission sometimes—putting it mildly?"

The lad hung his head, but believing that his telling the truth might lighten the sentence, he said, "Yes, I borrowed pencils at school without asking, and several times I forgot to return them. Then I joined some of the other boys in sneaking bananas."

"Were you never suspicioned?"

"Oh, yes; the banana man missed his fruit and he thought it might have been the school boys that took them. One day he cornered us, and as he saw us hungry school boys helping ourselves we found it easy to deny the charge."

"One more question. Do you think your early borrowing, sneaking and your lying habits made it easy for you to take $125.00 out of the cash drawer, and then lie as you have?"

"I'm afraid it did, sir."

STUDYING.
Are We Good Neighbors?
The Good Samaritan.
Luke 10:26-37.
By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Many of the most beautiful words and deeds of Jesus were drawn out of him by his enemies. The parable of the Good Samaritan is one of the finest literary and moral jewels of the New Testament, and it was occasioned by the artful attack of a scribe or lawyer. Never did Jesus show up to better advantage than in these dialectical efforts of his enemies to catch Him in a trap, and this parable is the product of the keenest and subtlest of these hostile schemes.

A Sinister Question.

The lawyer fenced for a good position with his question: "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" The question had good points, for it strikes into one of the greatest issues of life and yet it was spoiled and poisoned by its sinister purpose. He "tempted" Jesus, meaning that he was not a sincere inquirer for truths, but was bent on entrapping Him. He was seeking, not instruction, but controversy and partisan victory. Everything depends on the purpose for which and the spirit in which we ask a question. If we are sinners seeking after truth we shall find the way; but if we are trying in any way to ensnare others, if we only want to prove that we are right and they wrong, or to get advantage of them in some way then we are likely to get lost ourselves. Let us ask great questions as honest inquirers, and the answer will be forthcoming and we shall find eternal life.

A Lawyer Sent to the Law.

Jesus answered the lawyer's question by asking another. The Great Teacher was a master of dialectics, and no captious critic ever tried to catch Him without being caught himself. "What is written in the law?" quietly inquired Jesus of his questioner. The point is plain and sharp. The lawyer was referred to the law. He was shown to be ignorant of his own book. He did not need to ask this question, for he already had means of answering it. It was not more light he needed, but more use of the light he had. If we knew what is written in our Bibles we should be saved from many questions and perplexities. We are often searching for truth far off when the commandment is nigh us, even in our hearts. There is enough written for us already, and we do not need more light, but a clearer eye with which to see the light we have.

A Second Question.

The consistent course for the lawyer to have followed, had he been a sincere inquirer, owuld have been to begin the practice of his own profession and go back to his book. But this was not the point he had in view, and he now gave another twist to the argument. But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, "And who is my neighbor?" This was onther unnecessary question with a wrong motive. He was trying "to justify himself," and this was the poisoned point his question. Of how many excuses and subterfuges and lies is self-justification the root and purpose? The question was also unnecessary, because his Bible told him this in unmistakenable teaching. The book of Jonah could have answered his question in splendid terms. The question, "Who is my neighbor?" is likely to be the old heresy of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" The man that begins to ask this question has already lost touch with humanity and contracted his vision to a narrow circle. It is this question that splits society into classes and arrays ranks and races against one another.

The Parable.

At this point Jesus introduced his superb parable. The Samaritan put the wounded Jew in his place and treated him as his own self. His own comport was in having the stranger comfortable. His consciousness aws of the other man. This is the essence the gospel and the blood-red heart of of Samaritanism, the very spirit of the cross. This is the wonderful answer Jesus gave to the Jews, holding up before them a despised man of a despised race and religion as an example to them, rebuking their formal hypocrisy and showing them by one counted by them a heretic and heathen what true religion is. Priest and Levite, minister and deacon, the professional religionists had no time or sympathy for a robbed and wounded man of another race; there was no money in his pocket for them and he was not their neighbor. Jesus blew such religion away as hypocritical and contemptible and taught what real religion and true neighborliness are.

The Application.

Having drawn this picture Jesus now submitted to the lawyer which of the three was the true neighbor. The great Teacher made the truth so plain that he was willing to leave the answer to his captious critic himself. And the lawyer answered, "He that shewed mercy on him." Shut up so closely to the truth he could hardly go wrong. Yet Jesus told him nothing that he did not already know. He simply put the case so clearly before him as to draw the truth out of his own knowledge and conscience. The Master's parting word to the lawyer was, "Go and do thou likewise." This was the method and spirit of Jesus, this should be the spirit with which we deal with people of every race and religion. Who is our neighbor? Every human being. That poor man, that tempted man, that black man or that heathen man, that far-of man, he is your neighbor and mine. "Who needs me is my neighbor." The roadsides of life along which we are traveling are lined with those that need our help, and we have it in our power to put our shoulders under their burdens and help them to healing and life. Only this spirit will save society. The parting word of Jesus to the lawyer is also his word to us, "Go and do thou likewise."

STUDYING.
Are We Good Neighbors?
The Good Samaritan.
Luke 10:26-37.
By JAMES H. SNOWDEN, D. D.

Many of the most beautiful words and deeds of Jesus were drawn out of him by his enemies. The parable of the Good Samaritan is one of the finest literary and moral jewels of the New Testament, and it was occasioned by the artful attack of a scribe or lawyer. Never did Jesus show up to better advantage than in these dialectical efforts of his enemies to catch Him in a trap, and this parable is the product of the keenest and subtlest of these hostile schemes.

A Sinister Question.

The lawyer fenced for a good position with his question: "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" The question had good points, for it strikes into one of the greatest issues of life and yet it was spoiled and poisoned by its sinister purpose. He "tempted" Jesus, meaning that he was not a sincere inquirer for truths, but was bent on entrapping Him. He was seeking, not instruction, but controversy and partisan victory. Everything depends on the purpose for which and the spirit in which we ask a question. If we are sinners seeking after truth we shall find the way; but if we are trying in any way to ensnare others, if we only want to prove that we are right and they wrong, or to get advantage of them in some way then we are likely to get lost ourselves. Let us ask great questions as honest inquirers, and the answer will be forthcoming and we shall find eternal life.

A Lawyer Sent to the Law.

Jesus answered the lawyer's question by asking another. The Great Teacher was a master of dialectics, and no captious critic ever tried to catch Him without being caught himself. "What is written in the law?" quietly inquired Jesus of his questioner. The point is plain and sharp. The lawyer was referred to the law. He was shown to be ignorant of his own profession and sent back to his own book. He did not need to ask this question, for he already had means of answering it. It was not more light he needed, but more use of the light he had. If we knew what is written in our Bibles we should be saved from many questions and perplexities. We are often searching for truth far off when the commandment is nigh us, even in our hearts. There is enough written for us already, and we do not need more light, but a clearer eye with which to see the light we have.

A Second Question.

The consistent course for the lawyer to have followed, had he been a sincere inquirer, owuld have been to begin the practice of his own profession and go back to his book. But this was not the point he had in view, and he now gave another twist to the argument. But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, "And who is my neighbor?" This was onther unnecessary question with a wrong motive. He was trying "to justify himself," and this was the poisoned point his question. Of how many excuses and subterfuges and lies is self-justification the root and purpose? The question was also unnecessary, because his Bible told him this in unmistakenable teaching. The book of Jonah could have answered his question in splendid terms. The question, "Who is my neighbor?" is likely to be the old heresy of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" The man that begins to ask this question has already lost touch with humanity and contracted his vision to a narrow circle. It is this question that splits society into classes and arrays ranks and races against one another.

The Parable.

At this point Jesus introduced his superb parable. The Samaritan put the wounded Jew in his place and treated him as his own self. His own comport was in having the stranger comfortable. His consciousness aws of the other man. This is the essence the gospel and the blood-red heart of of Samaritanism, the very spirit of the cross. This is the wonderful answer Jesus gave to the Jews, holding up before them a despised man of a despised race and religion as an example to them, rebuking their formal hypocrisy and showing them by one counted by them a heretic and heathen what true religion is. Priest and Levite, minister and deacon, the professional religionists had no time or sympathy for a robbed and wounded man of another race; there was no money in his pocket for them and he was not their neighbor. Jesus blew such religion away as hypocritical and contemptible and taught what real religion and true neighborliness are.

The Application.

Having drawn this picture Jesus now submitted to the lawyer which of the three was the true neighbor. The great Teacher made the truth so plain that he was willing to leave the answer to his captious critic himself. And the lawyer answered, "He that shewed mercy on him." Shut up so closely to the truth he could hardly go wrong. Yet Jesus told him nothing that he did not already know. He simply put the case so clearly before him as to draw the truth out of his own knowledge and conscience. The Master's parting word to the lawyer was, "Go and do thou likewise." This was the method and spirit of Jesus, this should be the spirit with which we deal with people of every race and religion. Who is our neighbor? Every human being. That poor man, that tempted man, that black man or that heathen man, that far-of man, he is your neighbor and mine. "Who needs me is my neighbor." The roadsides of life along which we are traveling are lined with those that need our our help, and we have it in our power to put our shoulders under their burdens and help them to healing and life. Only this spirit will save society. The parting word of Jesus to the lawyer is also his word to us, "Go and do thou likewise."

HOME TRAINING

"Sneaking Things."

"Tell me," said a juvenile court judge, "how have you become a thief and a liar?"

"I don't know, judge," said the lad.

"Now be honest and tell me the truth and possibly I will not be so hard on you. Did you ever take something that did not belong to you—or when much younger did you borrow something without permission sometimes—putting it mildly?"

The lad hung his head, but believing that his telling the truth might lighten the sentence, he said, "Yes, I borrowed pencils at school without asking, and several times I forgot to return them. Then I joined some of the other boys in sneaking bananas."

"Were you never suspicioned?"

"Oh, yes; the banana man missed his fruit and he thought it might have been the school boys that took them. One day he cornered us, and as he saw us hungry school boys helping ourselves we found it easy to deny the charge."

"One more question. Do you think your early borrowing, sneaking and your lying habits made it easy for you to take $125.00 out of the cash drawer, and then lie as you have?"

"I'm afraid it did, sir."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON POINTS

(Send problems in question form to Church Editor; answers will appear in later issue.)

We need a new song book. What should be our first consideration in our selection?

Training pupils to worship through song must be considered so important that nothing else shall be permitted to be the final determiuing factor.

What can parents do in the home to help the teachers of our children in the church school?

(a) Have a definite place in the home to keep all supplies, so that the plea, "Couldn't find my book," may be less often heard.

(b) Insist that supplies be kept in their proper places.

(c) Have regular time for preparation of lesson and see to it that work is always attended to at these times.

(d) Have each child report Sunday morning before leaving home as to completeness of equipment — books, pencils, offering, etc.

(e) Show appreciation of work by taking an active part in the work of the school as children will value what their elders value.

(f) Center home interest each week about truths of lesson, by general conversation, anecdote and conduct. Be doers of the word before the children—not hearers only.

Live Questions For Discussion on the Sunday School Lesson.

- The Good Samaritan. Luke 10:25-37—for Sunday, November 30.

1. How far away must one be to be "out of bounds" of our neighborhood, according to the teaching of this lesson?

2. How did Jesus rebuke prejudices?

3. What tasks for modern "Good Samaritans?"

4. What are the personal, social causes of poverty, crime, disease, war? How can we set our religion to work and make it effective in better community conditions?

5. What may help us to love our neighbors as ourselves, and what may keep us from it?

CLERICUS: Modern inventions have brought the world into one great neighborhood. We talk on leather from hides raised in South America. We ride on rubber raised in Africa. A plague in North China threatens the whole world. We read the news of the world in our daily papers. We kkow of a disaster in Japan a few minutes after it has happened. Our missionary societies carry on their work of helpfulness in every continent. The The world is a neighborhood. We must make it a brotherhood.

Lesson Prayer.

Dear Savior, forgive us for the little love we have shown to our neighbors. We have been critical and negligent towards those who so need our ministry. Help us to seek others in thy name as thou hast sought us in our deep need. It's thy dear name we pray. Amen.

SESSION HELD BY STOCK MEN

Reports Show Salem Leads County in Shipment of Cattle.

At the annual meeting of the Columbiana County Live Stock Co., held in the offices of the Columbiana County Farm Bureau Saturday afternoon, it was disclosed that Salem was the heaviest live stock shipping point in the county.

During the last fiscal year, 36 cars of live stock have been shipped out of Salem and only three cars have been loaded and shipped out of East Liverpool.

Phil E. Heim, manager for the county Live Stock Co., will make his annual report at this meeting, and it will show more than 1,200 head of tuberculin cattle were shipped out of the county to the Cleveland market during the "T. B." test work, or close to 50 carloads.

Two state men arrived in Lisbon Saturday morning to address the meeting, these being G. M. Aaaygar, of the Department of Live Stock Marketing of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and Mr. Hammons, of the Extension Service Department of Ohio State University.

There has been a decided increase in the shipping of live stock out of this county since the auxiliary of the County Farm Bureau has been in direct charge of Mr. Heim. Throughout the year he has been active in securing shipments to be made on the co-operative sales basis, and as a result shippers have received more for their live stock than those who sold to those buyers who took the stock at the barn gate.

Stockholders are to elect a board of directors at their meeting Saturday, and the latter will organize by electing officers later.

A special meeting of the executive committee of the Columbiana County Farm Bureau has been called to convene in Lisbon the afternoon of December 12, at which time consideration will be given to the subject of selecting a successor to County Agent Clarence E. Rowland, who has resigned to take a similar berth with the Lorain County Farm Bureau.

The executive board has received several applications for county agents for the job in this county.

Alliance Man Given Stucco Contract for County Home Work

The contract for placing a stucco finish on the brick buildings at the county home has been awarded to M. R. Montague of Alliance, who had completed some work in this connection before the price of material had been advanced on him by stucco stone interests after the latter had given him a price on the material.

The county commissioners, after the attempt to increase the cost of this material to the county of $6 per ton, cancelled the contract, although Montague declared he was prepared to absorb the loss.

Bids were again advertised for, and this week they were again awarded Montague, but for the labor only. The stone to be used on the job was advertised separately, and this award was made to the Rock Bond company of Van Wert on their bid of $36.94 per ton delivered.

The D. F. Nellis company of East Liverpool put in a bid of $1,795 for labor, and H. C. Armstrong of Lisbon bid $3,692. The bid of Montague for labor was $1,800.

Number of Rulings Handed Down Here In Court Actions

A decree of divorce has been granted Maude M. Pollock of East Liverpool against her husband Floyd E. Pollock, and the custody of minor children has also been awarded Mrs. Pollock. The father of the children has also been granted permission of reasonable visitation with his children, and he has also been ordered to pay his wife $5 per week for the support of the children. The cross petition in this action has been dismissed by the court.

Judgment for costs has been rendered against Ira Blackburn, a former attorney of Steubenville in his case against M. L. Green, which was tried before Judge Turnbaugh early in the week.

No motion for a new trial has been filed in the case of Lewis Davis against the City of East Palestine, and a judgment has been entered against the defendant municipality in favor of the plaintiff for $2,250. The judgment has been entered on the findings of the court.

A motion for a new trial in the case of William J. Wiggers, as administrator against John Penkava has been overruled, and judgment on the verdict of the jury which heard the evidence in this case and returned a finding of $1,788.88 has been entered in favor of the plaintiff. Exceptions have been noted by counsel for the defense, and it may follow that this cause will go to the Appellate Court.

On their own motion, D. C. McCalla, John S. McNutt, Mary Eaton and W. F. Eaton have been made party defendants in the action filed in common pleas court by Cynthia A. Hively against Robert S. Dilworth and others. Permission has been given the new defendants to file their answer instantly.

SESSION HELD BY STOCK MEN

Reports Show Salem Leads County in Shipment of Cattle.

At the annual meeting of the Columbiana County Live Stock Co., held in the offices of the Columbiana County Farm Bureau Saturday afternoon, it was disclosed that Salem was the heaviest live stock shipping point in the county.

During the last fiscal year, 36 cars of live stock have been shipped out of Salem and only three cars have been loaded and shipped out of East Liverpool.

Phil E. Heim, manager for the county Live Stock Co., will make his annual report at this meeting, and it will show more than 1,200 head of tuberculin cattle were shipped out of the county to the Cleveland market during the "T. B." test work, or close to 50 carloads.

Two state men arrived in Lisbon Saturday morning to address the meeting, these being G. M. Aaaygar, of the Department of Live Stock Marketing of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and Mr. Hammons, of the Extension Service Department of Ohio State University.

There has been a decided increase in the shipping of live stock out of this county since the auxiliary of the County Farm Bureau has been in direct charge of Mr. Heim. Throughout the year he has been active in securing shipments to be made on the co-operative sales basis, and as a result shippers have received more for their live stock than those who sold to those buyers who took the stock at the barn gate.

Stockholders are to elect a board of directors at their meeting Saturday, and the latter will organize by electing officers later.

A special meeting of the executive committee of the Columbiana County Farm Bureau has been called to convene in Lisbon the afternoon of December 12, at which time consideration will be given to the subject of selecting a successor to County Agent Clarence E. Rowland, who has resigned to take a similar berth with the Lorain County Farm Bureau.

The executive board has received several applications for county agents for the job in this county.

Alliance Man Given Stucco Contract for County Home Work

The contract for placing a stucco finish on the brick buildings at the county home has been awarded to M. R. Montague of Alliance, who had completed some work in this connection before the price of material had been advanced on him by stucco stone interests after the latter had given him a price on the material.

The county commissioners, after the attempt to increase the cost of this material to the county of $6 per ton, cancelled the contract, although Montague declared he was prepared to absorb the loss.

Bids were again advertised for, and this week they were again awarded Montague, but for the labor only. The stone to be used on the job was advertised separately, and this award was made to the Rock Bond company of Van Wert on their bid of $36.94 per ton delivered.

The D. F. Nellis company of East Liverpool put in a bid of $1,795 for labor, and H. C. Armstrong of Lisbon bid $3,692. The bid of Montague for labor was $1,800.

SESSION HELD BY STOCK MEN

Reports Show Salem Leads County in Shipment of Cattle.

At the annual meeting of the Columbiana County Live Stock Co., held in the offices of the Columbiana County Farm Bureau Saturday afternoon, it was disclosed that Salem was the heaviest live stock shipping point in the county.

During the last fiscal year, 36 cars of live stock have been shipped out of Salem and only three cars have been loaded and shipped out of East Liverpool.

Phil E. Heim, manager for the county Live Stock Co., will make his annual report at this meeting, and it will show more than 1,200 head of tuberculin cattle were shipped out of the county to the Cleveland market during the "T. B." test work, or close to 50 carloads.

Two state men arrived in Lisbon Saturday morning to address the meeting, these being G. M. Aaaygar, of the Department of Live Stock Marketing of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and Mr. Hammons, of the Extension Service Department of Ohio State University.

There has been a decided increase in the shipping of live stock out of this county since the auxiliary of the County Farm Bureau has been in direct charge of Mr. Heim. Throughout the year he has been active in securing shipments to be made on the co-operative sales basis, and as a result shippers have received more for their live stock than those who sold to those buyers who took the stock at the barn gate.

Stockholders are to elect a board of directors at their meeting Saturday, and the latter will organize by electing officers later.

A special meeting of the executive committee of the Columbiana County Farm Bureau has been called to convene in Lisbon the afternoon of December 12, at which time consideration will be given to the subject of selecting a successor to County Agent Clarence E. Rowland, who has resigned to take a similar berth with the Lorain County Farm Bureau.

The executive board has received several applications for county agents for the job in this county.

Alliance Man Given Stucco Contract for County Home Work

The contract for placing a stucco finish on the brick buildings at the county home has been awarded to M. R. Montague of Alliance, who had completed some work in this connection before the price of material had been advanced on him by stucco stone interests after the latter had given him a price on the material.

The county commissioners, after the attempt to increase the cost of this material to the county of $6 per ton, cancelled the contract, although Montague declared he was prepared to absorb the loss.

Bids were again advertised for, and this week they were again awarded Montague, but for the labor only. The stone to be used on the job was advertised separately, and this award was made to the Rock Bond company of Van Wert on their bid of $36.94 per ton delivered.

The D. F. Nellis company of East Liverpool put in a bid of $1,795 for labor, and H. C. Armstrong of Lisbon bid $3,692. The bid of Montague for labor was $1,800.

DR. W. E. BIEDERWOLF'S FRIDAY NIGHT SERMON

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, in his sermon Friday evening, said:

Text: Phil 1:6, "Being confident of this very thing, that He who began a good work in you will finish it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Some one has said that when Peter preached in his day it took only one sermon to convert 3,000 sinners, but nowadays it takes 3,000 sermons to convert one sinner and then he usually blackslides.

Of course, that isn't so. The fellow who said it likes to play with words more than he likes to tell the truth. But it is true that the church is in a terribly back-slidden condition. People will take an oath of allegiance and promise of the being of some account to God and the church, but the first thing you know they begin to drift and by and by they are missed from the prayer meeting and then they are missed from the church on Sunday morning, and after a few months more they are back with the old companions, back in the old life, and are lost to God and to the church of God.

I had a friend by the name of Hadley, who ran a mission in New York and a good many of his converts were of this class, and he had so much trouble with them that he said he thought the best way to make sure of them—was to have a guillotine and chop their heads off as fast as they came.

It's a good deal like the Jew and the Irishman who were in a boat and they got to arguing about religion. The Jew stood for the Pentuateuch and Pat, of course, was for the pope and the Catholic church. The discussion got rather warm and in their wrangling they upset the boat and out they both went. Pat could swim, but the Jew couldn't. The Jew went down once and as he came up Pat grabbed him and said, "Now do you believe in the Catholic church?" and the Jew said "No," and Pat let him sink. He came up a second time and Pat said again, "Now will you believe in the Catholic church?" and the Jew spluttered out "No," and down he went again. As he came up for the third and last time, Pat grabbed him and said, "Do you believe in the Catholic church?" and Isaac knew it was all up with him if he didn't, and he said, "Yes, I believe." "Begorra, then," said Pat; "die in the faith," and he shoved him under.

Well, now that's an allright remedy for backsliding, but there are just two things wrong with it.

In the first place it's a dangerous experiment, for if you don't hold out longer than some people do it's a pretty good sign you weren't converted at all. And then what? But in the second place a man's not converted merely to go to heaven when he dies. God wants you to live and amount to something. Don't be what George Eliot in her "Mill of the Floss" calls a "mollycoddle." If you're going to be that sort of a spiritual jelly fish you'll just be washed about with the slow tide and of course you'll never arrive anywhere.

The purpose of this sermon tonight is to help you get started right. I hope every one of you has made up his or her mind to be a gisorous, high-souled Christian man or woman and not a dawdling weakling. You've been floating down stream and now you're going to pull up I know it's harder to pull than it is to float. And now I want to give you a few words of advice. They're out of the word of God and out of my own experience and I know they'll help you.

Study the Bible.

If you expect to grow you must have the right kind of food and there's nothing so good for newborn children of the Kingdom as the sincere milk and the Simon pure, unadulterated meat of the Word of God.

Get a Bible of your own. And get a good one. Don't buy an expensive hat and a cheap Bible.

Then take every word of it as God's message for you. Never mind what the critics say. No other book has ever withstood such attacks. They've said, "This couldn't be," and "That couldn't be," but every time we've dug up some old tablet or discovered some old monument which showed that it could be and that it was.

I remember when I was a kid they said Jesus never fasted forty days, because no man could go that long without food and not die, but there was a fellow out in Illinois who said he'd try it and see if he couldn't call their bluff. His name was Dr. Tanner. Well, he fasted forty days and then said he'd go them some better, and he never took a bit of grub for 3 days. And the old critics never opened their chops about fasting again.

Backed up by the Spirit of God, Samson one day slew a thousand of his enemies with the jawbone of an ass, but without this backing the higher critic preachers are trying to do the same thing with the same weapon.

Of course, there are things in the Bible you can't understand. It would be surprising if you could. But the Bible is a mine full of rich treasure and the deeper you dig the more you find.

In the Dresden gallery of royal gems is a silver egg and when you touch a spring it opens and discloses a golden chicken, and when you touch the chicken it opens and discloses a crown studded with gems; you touch the crown and it opens and discloses a magnificent diamond ring. And that's the way it is with the Bible. The more you study it the more you touch its successive springs and as you go down into it you will find ever-increasing revelations of duty and wonder richer than the gems from any royal gallery.

Don't Forget To Pray.

There are too many church members that don't know how to pray. About all they know about prayer is what they read in a book or hear the preacher say on Sunday.

Some people pray only when they get scared or get in trouble, but if God ever brings them out it isn't because he is answering their prayers; it's just to give them one more chance to get right with God and amount to something before they die.

Paul says: "Pray without ceasing." Now you can take that in two ways.

It means to hold on to God until you get what you go for. The Bible says: "Knock and it shall be opened unto you." But some of you like the little boys ring a door bell on Hallowe'en night and then run away.

And then it means to keep in touch with Christ; to continue with Him. You can't always be on your knees, but your heart can, and that is the way to get your strength and grace and to get your life transformed.

There was one time a young girl who had a very beautiful character and she was most attractive and people often asked her to tell them the secret of her beautiful life, but every time she would say, "Just wait until I am dead, then pry open the locket that hangs around my neck and you will know the secret," and when she died they pried it open and they found this verse of Scripture, "Whom not having seen I love." It was her communion with God that transformed her life.

You could be a millionaire in grace but most of you are satisfied with being hoboes. You go and beg for crumbs from God's table, but if God had his way with you he'd give you a whole loaf.

If you pray you won't take somebody's piece of hand-painted china because you happened to get four of a kind or some other kind of a lucky hand.

If you pray, people won't look at you and say, "There goes an old skinflint of a deadbeat," because you'll pay your debts.

If you pray, nobody will ever have any occasion to call you beer swillers.

If you pray then you won't go and see a chorus girl flop around with scarcely enough clothes on her to make a stocking for a Lilliputian.

If you pray that's some things you won't do that a lot of you church members are doing now.

There isn't a better song for you to sing than:

"I need Thee every hour,
Stay thou near by;
Temptations lose their power
Where Thou art night."

Give God Benefit of Doubt.

Don't argue with the devil—hit him. He's older than you are and he's liable to get the best of you.

The whole thing is a question of bigness and littleness.

I get disgusted with these church members who are all the time trying to see how much of the world they can hold on to and still be Christians. They say, "Can't I be a Christian and play golf on Sunday? Can't I be a Christian and dance, and can't I drink beer, and can't I do that and still be a Christian?"

Oh, for my sake, if you've got a streak in you like that, get rid of it. That's a piggish disposition. If you'd just need to be carrying slop to it all the time.

Don't try to see how small you can be. I remember in Scranton there was a man who was a dwarf. He worked in the mines and every night about 6 o'clock he would go by the mission where I was preaching. He was a short little fellow and much deformed and had to walk with his head bent far down toward the ground. And every night, with his face all black with coal dust and with his dinner pail in his hand he would go by my place. And I used to feel sorry for him, but oh, I have though so many times since then that I would rather have a dwarfed and puny body if I could have a spirit in it like the spirit of Jesus than to have a big and able body with a soul in it that was dwarfed and shrivelled and atrophied, didn't care to grow and expand and be God-like. And I tell you now the only road to spiritual beauty and satisfaction of soul is the road that leads by the way of the altar and the cross.

And then there is another side to it. It's not so much a question as to whether dancing or beer drinking and some of these things are wrong or right in themselves, but it's a question again of how big or little you are going to be. Something that may not hurt you may hurt somebody else. In Paul's day they sacrificed animals to the heathen gods and then sold the flesh down on the market. Some church members thought Christians ought not to eat because it had been sacrificed to heathen gods. But Paul knew the meat was all right and he must have been down to the market one day to get a chunk of it for dinner and some of the church members saw him going home with it and they told him they didn't think it was right, and that he ought to set a better example, and Paul said, "The meat was all right, but if some of you fellows with a weak conscience are going to get offended at it, why I'll get along without it." And he threw it down. An old dog grabbed and shot around the corner with it.

Paul said, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world stands." And if any sacrifice that I can make I can help and strengthen and uphold and save a weaker brother, I want to be big enough to make that sacrifice. Don't you?

Join the Church of Your Choice.

You say, "Can't I be a Christian and stay out of the church?" Well, suppose everybody said that? If it's right for one to stay out, it's right for two and if it's right for two it's right for two thousand. And if everybody did like you want to do, we wouldn't have any church at all and we'd have a pretty mess on our hands.

But as far as you are concerned yourself, you'll make the biggest mistake of your life if you don't get into the church just as quick as you possibly can.

A young fellow who walked the aisle one night, said to his father the next day. "I've decided to be a Christian, but why is it necessary to join the church?"

"Well, my son," said the father, "there are a great many reasons why you ought to do it, but come over here and I'll show you one of the biggest ones." They went over to the grate that was full of live coals and the father took the tongs and picked up a coal that was red hot and laid out on the hearth by itself, and as it began to cool off and lose its luster and turn black and get cold the young fellow said, "That's enough, father; me for the church."

Do you see?

Yes, join the church. Don't wait until you find a perfect church for that will be a post-resurrection church sure, and you can't afford to wait that long.

You say, "Which church shall I join?"

Join any of them.

Join the one where most of the people you associate with are members.

Join the one where the rest of your mamily are.

But join any one of them and you'll be a great deal better off than if you don't join at all.

Would you join a church where the pastor played cards and danced and preached little essays and criticised the Bible?

Not on your life.

Well, someone says, "What would you do if you were already a member of a church like that?"

I wouldn't wait to get my hat.

But join the church. You need the church and the church needs you.

The church is the only institution where you are welcome to membership without lying. If you don't pay your dues in the lodge its 23 for you. But I think the church is wrong. You ought not let anybody be a member unless they pay, and I make a rule that every member has to pay one cent a week—at least one cent. Don't tell me you can't pay one cent a week and then go and blow yourself for a sack of peanuts or a nickel show or a dozen other things like that you spend money for. Don't think I'm advocating any penny business for the church; the poorest of you can pay a nickel a week, but its the principle of the thing I'm talking about. They don't need your penny but it's not fair to you to allow you to make a cheap skate out of you. Don't deadbeat your way through the church. Don't be a taightwad. Don't sing through your nose to keep from wearing out your false teeth. I heard of an old sponge in the church who was so stingy that every time they announced "Old Hundred" he would sing "The Ninety and Nine" to save one per cent. You say you're poor. Well, you can give one cent, can's you? Well, then, make a vow to God that you'll give it religiously every week—some definite stated sum, no matter how small, and don't go and warm a seat for an hour and a half and take in all the service and then be so busy blowing your nose when the collection plate comes around that you can't see it. You may think you are worshiping God, but you're only making sport for the devil.

A woman wrote me a letter saying that she didn't feel welcome in the church because she couldn't pay anything and she spent two cents for a stamp to tell me. Why didn't she give that two cents to the church? You don't want to give, that's all.

Now you see what I'm driving at. I am lampooning you church members who can pay and yet go through the whole year and never drop a sourmarkie in the collection plate. If you are going to keep up that kind of business, for heaven's sake the next tive the plate comes around take something out—it's for the heathen anyhow.

If a church has a membership of 300 you'd be surprised to know how many of them go a whole year through and never cough up a red copper. I tell you the church needs training here.

I heard of a little fellow who was in church one Sunday morning with his mother and when the collection was started, to her horror and humiliation she found she had left her pocketbook at home and she said: "Willie, what in the world shall I do?" And Willie said: "Here, mamma, you take my penny and I'll hide under the seat." That little fellow had been so trained in the propriety and decency and good sense of giving that he'd rather hide under the seat than be seen in the house of God without a little something to drop in the collection plate. May the little fellow's tribe increase.

Go To Work.

Do you want to know how to defeat the devil? Well, one way is to keep busy and he won't bother you so much.

The other way is to be fixed for him when he comes. It's no kid-glove proposition. You want to go at him with a huskying-peg, a pitch-fork and a kraut maul. But what are you going to do if you're not in fighting trim? But you might as well lie in your bed all your life and expect your muscles to get into a Jess Willard condition as to take no exercise in the work of God and expect to grow strong and vigorous enough to put the devil out of commission.

Standing water always stagnates and so does a standing Christian.

Being a Christian is a good deal like riding a bicycle. You've got to keep a-going or you'll fall off.

I read of a little six-year-old philosopher who fell out of bed and bumped her head on the floor. She sat up and rubbed the sore place and said: "I dess I slept too near where I dot in." Now you've gotten into the Christian life, but if you lie down and go to sleep just where you got in you'll be likely to roll out at the same place.

But you can't push that illustration too far, because the Christian life is no featherbed proposition. Paul says: "Don't go to sleep, but be up and on the job."

Two of the best rules for your Christian life are:

Always witness for Christ. Do this whenever the opportunity comes. You'll be surprised what a difference it makes. Then do it whenever the occasion demands it. Don't allow people to sneer at your Christ and belittle your Lord. When some little lump-headed piece of sophisticated assinity laughs at religion or derides Jesus Christ or gets off a rotten story, don't sit there like a little coward and look sheepish. Rebuke him like a Christian gentleman ought to.

The other rule is to win someone else for Jesus Christ. They saved a fellow from a wreck some time ago and when they got him out he was unconscious, and when they brought him back the first thing he said was, "There's another man." Saved himself his first thought was for somebody else. God give you a spirit like that, and you'll never know what it is to be a Christian until you get it. You'll never know what it is to be happy until you have brought someone else to Jesus Christ and if you die without trying it your last hours will be full of regret.

And now in a single sentence if I were to sum it all up I would say:

Trust and Obey.

Trust. Don't always be doubting your salvation. God says if you would confess and acknowledge His Christ he would save you, and that's enough.

I know I'm saved, not because I feel like it; not because I'm so good, but because thirty years ago I staked my all on his word. My reputation, my character, my soul, my future I piled on top of the Bible and when the Bible goes down and God goes down I'll go down with them.

They obey. In the ultimate it's not your obedience that saves you; it's your faith. Trust Him and He'll make up for all you lack when you come to die. But of course you must do His will. Your obedience is a sign of your faith. Jesus says: "If you love me you will keep my commandments."

What kind of Chistian is the church member who bobs up in church Sunday morning and then takes a header into the world on Monday, going to a dance on Monday night, a vulgar vaudeville on Tuesday night, a beer party on Wednesday night and a game of poker on Thursday night, another dance on Friday night and then turns up in church again on Sunday morning, warms a seat for an hour and a half, drops a little money into the plate and then' off again in the same old way. "Why call me 'Lord, Lord,' and do not the things I say?"

And then keep on going. If you fall don't throw up your hands and quit. I beat Zimmerman in a bicycle race once. It was the year he became world's champion. They gave him

Ethylized Gasoline

For one year and nine months ethylized gasoline has been on sale. It is now being distributed through about 20,000 filling stations covering one-third of the territory of the United States.

About 200,000,000 gallons have been used by more than 1,000,000 motorists with complete safety and satisfaction.

Recently a distressing accident occurred at an experimental plant, where a new process for the manufacture of tetraethyl lead, one of the constituents used in ethylizing gasoline, was under development.

Tetraethyl lead is a poison, as are many raw materials which enter into the manufacture of harmless compounds. Ethylized gasoline consists of 1,300 parts of ordinary gasoline containing less than one part of tetraethyl lead.

This statement is issued to make plain the all-important difference between tetraethyl lead, the raw material, and ethylized gasoline, the commercial product.

Ethylized gasoline is more than an improved fuel, giving smoothness to the motor and eliminating knocks; it is a scientific discovery, which, in its ultimate development, will contribute largely to the conservation of the world's supply of gasoline.

Exhaustive tests have been conducted which have established the safety of ethylized gasoline when used as a motor fuel. These tests have been confirmed by the United States Bureau of Mines, which is making additional studies to determine whether any possible injury can result from continued contact when used for other than motor purposes. Scientific data based on these studies will be submitted to any health commissioner or other public health official on request.

DR. W. E. BIEDERWOLF'S FRIDAY NIGHT SERMON

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, in his sermon Friday evening, said:

Text: Phil 1:6, "Being confident of this very thing, that He who began a good work in you will finish it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Some one has said that when Peter preached in his day it took only one sermon to convert 3,000 sinners, but nowadays it takes 3,000 sermons to convert one sinner and then he usually blackslides.

Of course, that isn't so. The fellow who said it likes to play with words more than he likes to tell the truth. But it is true that the church is in a terribly back-slidden condition. People will take an oath of allegiance and promise of the being of some account to God and the church, but the first thing you know they begin to drift and by and by they are missed from the prayer meeting and then they are missed from the church on Sunday morning, and after a few months more they are back with the old companions, back in the old life, and are lost to God and to the church of God.

I had a friend by the name of Hadley, who ran a mission in New York and a good many of his converts were of this class, and he had so much trouble with them that he said he thought the best way to make sure of them—was to have a guillotine and chop their heads off as fast as they came.

It's a good deal like the Jew and the Irishman who were in a boat and they got to arguing about religion. The Jew stood for the Pentuateuch and Pat, of course, was for the pope and the Catholic church. The discussion got rather warm and in their wrangling they upset the boat and out they both went. Pat could swim, but the Jew couldn't. The Jew went down once and as he came up Pat grabbed him and said, "Now do you believe in the Catholic church?" and the Jew said "No," and Pat let him sink. He came up a second time and Pat said again, "Now will you believe in the Catholic church?" and the Jew spluttered out "No," and down he went again. As he came up for the third and last time, Pat grabbed him and said, "Do you believe in the Catholic church?" and Isaac knew it was all up with him if he didn't, and he said, "Yes, I believe." "Begorra, then," said Pat; "die in the faith," and he shoved him under.

Well, now that's an allright remedy for backsliding, but there are just two things wrong with it.

In the first place it's a dangerous experiment, for if you don't hold out longer than some people do it's a pretty good sign you weren't converted at all. And then what? But in the second place a man's not converted merely to go to heaven when he dies. God wants you to live and amount to something. Don't be what George Eliot in her "Mill of the Floss" calls a "mollycoddle." If you're going to be that sort of a spiritual jelly fish you'll just be washed about with the slow tide and of course you'll never arrive anywhere.

The purpose of this sermon tonight is to help you get started right. I hope every one of you has made up his or her mind to be a gisorous, high-souled Christian man or woman and not a dawdling weakling. You've been floating down stream and now you're going to pull up I know it's harder to pull than it is to float. And now I want to give you a few words of advice. They're out of the word of God and out of my own experience and I know they'll help you.

Study the Bible.

If you expect to grow you must have the right kind of food and there's nothing so good for newborn children of the Kingdom as the sincere milk and the Simon pure, unadulterated meat of the Word of God.

Get a Bible of your own. And get a good one. Don't buy an expensive hat and a cheap Bible.

Then take every word of it as God's message for you. Never mind what the critics say. No other book has ever withstood such attacks. They've said, "This couldn't be," and "That couldn't be," but every time we've dug up some old tablet or discovered some old monument which showed that it could be and that it was.

I remember when I was a kid they said Jesus never fasted forty days, because no man could go that long without food and not die, but there was a fellow out in Illinois who said he'd try it and see if he couldn't call their bluff. His name was Dr. Tanner. Well, he fasted forty days and then said he'd go them some better, and he never took a bit of grub for 3 days. And the old critics never opened their chops about fasting again.

Backed up by the Spirit of God, Samson one day slew a thousand of his enemies with the jawbone of an ass, but without this backing the higher critic preachers are trying to do the same thing with the same weapon.

Of course, there are things in the Bible you can't understand. It would be surprising if you could. But the Bible is a mine full of rich treasure and the deeper you dig the more you find.

In the Dresden gallery of royal gems is a silver egg and when you touch a spring it opens and discloses a golden chicken, and when you touch the chicken it opens and discloses a crown studded with gems; you touch the crown and it opens and discloses a magnificent diamond ring. And that's the way it is with the Bible. The more you study it the more you touch its successive springs and as you go down into it you will find ever-increasing revelations of duty and wonder richer than the gems from any royal gallery.

Don't Forget To Pray.

There are too many church members that don't know how to pray. About all they know about prayer is what they read in a book or hear the preacher say on Sunday.

Some people pray only when they get scared or get in trouble, but if God ever brings them out it isn't because he is answering their prayers; it's just to give them one more chance to get right with God and amount to something before they die.

Paul says: "Pray without ceasing." Now you can take that in two ways.

It means to hold on to God until you get what you go for. The Bible says: "Knock and it shall be opened unto you." But some of you like the little boys ring a door bell on Hallowe'en night and then run away.

And then it means to keep in touch with Christ; to continue with Him. You can't always be on your knees, but your heart can, and that is the way to get your strength and grace and to get your life transformed.

There was one time a young girl who had a very beautiful character and she was most attractive and people often asked her to tell them the secret of her beautiful life, but every time she would say, "Just wait until I am dead, then pry open the locket that hangs around my neck and you will know the secret," and when she died they pried it open and they found this verse of Scripture, "Whom not having seen I love." It was her communion with God that transformed her life.

You could be a millionaire in grace but most of you are satisfied with being hoboes. You go and beg for crumbs from God's table, but if God had his way with you he'd give you a whole loaf.

If you pray you won't take somebody's piece of hand-painted china because you happened to get four of a kind or some other kind of a lucky hand.

If you pray, people won't look at you and say, "There goes an old skinflint of a deadbeat," because you'll pay your debts.

If you pray, nobody will ever have any occasion to call you beer swillers.

If you pray then you won't go and see a chorus girl flop around with scarcely enough clothes on her to make a stocking for a Lilliputian.

If you pray that's some things you won't do that a lot of you church members are doing now.

There isn't a better song for you to sing than:

"I need Thee every hour,
Stay thou near by;
Temptations lose their power
Where Thou art night."

Give God Benefit of Doubt.

Don't argue with the devil—hit him. He's older than you are and he's liable to get the best of you.

The whole thing is a question of bigness and littleness.

I get disgusted with these church members who are all the time trying to see how much of the world they can hold on to and still be Christians. They say, "Can't I be a Christian and play golf on Sunday? Can't I be a Christian and dance, and can't I drink beer, and can't I do that and still be a Christian?"

Oh, for my sake, if you've got a streak in you like that, get rid of it. That's a piggish disposition. If you'd just need to be carrying slop to it all the time.

Don't try to see how small you can be. I remember in Scranton there was a man who was a dwarf. He worked in the mines and every night about 6 o'clock he would go by the mission where I was preaching. He was a short little fellow and much deformed and had to walk with his head bent far down toward the ground. And every night, with his face all black with coal dust and with his dinner pail in his hand he would go by my place. And I used to feel sorry for him, but oh, I have though so many times since then that I would rather have a dwarfed and puny body if I could have a spirit in it like the spirit of Jesus than to have a big and able body with a soul in it that was dwarfed and shrivelled and atrophied, didn't care to grow and expand and be God-like. And I tell you now the only road to spiritual beauty and satisfaction of soul is the road that leads by the way of the altar and the cross.

And then there is another side to it. It's not so much a question as to whether dancing or beer drinking and some of these things are wrong or right in themselves, but it's a question again of how big or little you are going to be. Something that may not hurt you may hurt somebody else. In Paul's day they sacrificed animals to the heathen gods and then sold the flesh down on the market. Some church members thought Christians ought not to eat because it had been sacrificed to heathen gods. But Paul knew the meat was all right and he must have been down to the market one day to get a chunk of it for dinner and some of the church members saw him going home with it, and they told him they didn't think it was right, and that he ought to set a better example, and Paul said, "The meat was all right, but if some of you fellows with a weak conscience are going to get offended at it, why I'll get along without it." And he threw it down. An old dog grabbed and shot around the corner with it.

Paul said, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world stands." And if any sacrifice that I can make I can help and strengthen and uphold and save a weaker brother, I want to be big enough to make that sacrifice. Don't you?

Join the Church of Your Choice.

You say, "Can't I be a Christian and stay out of the church?" Well, suppose everybody said that? If it's right for one to stay out, it's right for two and if it's right for two it's right for two thousand. And if everybody did like you want to do, we wouldn't have any church at all and we'd have a pretty mess on our hands.

But as far as you are concerned yourself, you'll make the biggest mistake of your life if you don't get into the church just as quick as you possibly can.

A young fellow who walked the aisle one night, said to his father the next day. "I've decided to be a Christian, but why is it necessary to join the church?"

"Well, my son," said the father, "there are a great many reasons why you ought to do it, but come over here and I'll show you one of the biggest ones." They went over to the grate that was full of live coals and the father took the tongs and picked up a coal that was red hot and laid out on the hearth by itself, and as it began to cool off and lose its luster and turn black and get cold the young fellow said, "That's enough, father; me for the church."

Do you see?

Yes, join the church. Don't wait until you find a perfect church for that will be a post-resurrection church sure, and you can't afford to wait that long.

You say, "Which church shall I join?"

Join any of them.

Join the one where most of the people you associate with are members.

Join the one where the rest of your mamily are.

But join any one of them and you'll be a great deal better off than if you don't join at all.

Would you join a church where the pastor played cards and danced and preached little essays and criticised the Bible?

Not on your life.

Well, someone says, "What would you do if you were already a member of a church like that?"

I wouldn't wait to get my hat.

But join the church. You need the church and the church needs you.

The church is the only institution where you are welcome to membership without lying. If you don't pay your dues in the lodge its 23 for you. But I think the church is wrong. You ought not let anybody be a member unless they pay, and I make a rule that every member has to pay one cent a week—at least one cent. Don't tell me you can't pay one cent a week and then go and blow yourself for a sack of peanuts or a nickel show or a dozen other things like that you spend money for. Don't think I'm advocating any penny business for the church; the poorest of you can pay a nickel a week, but its the principle of the thing I'm talking about. They don't need your penny but it's not fair to you to allow you to make a cheap skate out of you. Don't deadbeat your way through the church. Don't be a taightwad. Don't sing through your nose to keep from wearing out your false teeth. I heard of an old sponge in the church who was so stingy that every time they announced "Old Hundred" he would sing "The Ninety and Nine" to save one per cent. You say you're poor. Well, you can give one cent, can's you? Well, then, make a vow to God that you'll give it religiously every week—some definite stated sum, no matter how small, and don't go and warm a seat for an hour and a half and take in all the service and then be so busy blowing your nose when the collection plate comes around that you can't see it. You may think you are worshiping God, but you're only making sport for the devil.

A woman wrote me a letter saying that she didn't feel welcome in the church because she couldn't pay anything and she spent two cents for a stamp to tell me. Why didn't she give that two cents to the church? You don't want to give, that's all.

Now you see what I'm driving at. I am lampooning you church members who can pay and yet go through the whole year and never drop a sourmarkie in the collection plate. If you are going to keep up that kind of business, for heaven's sake the next tive the plate comes around take something out—it's for the heathen anyhow.

If a church has a membership of 300 you'd be surprised to know how many of them go a whole year through and never cough up a red copper. I tell you the church needs training here.

I heard of a little fellow who was in church one Sunday morning with his mother and when the collection was started, to her horror and humiliation she found she had left her pocketbook at home and she said: "Willie, what in the world shall I do?" And Willie said: "Here, mamma, you take my penny and I'll hide under the seat." That little fellow had been so trained in the propriety and decency and good sense of giving that he'd rather hide under the seat than be seen in the house of God without a little something to drop in the collection plate. May the little fellow's tribe increase.

Go To Work.

Do you want to know how to defeat the devil? Well, one way is to keep busy and he won't bother you so much.

The other way is to be fixed for him when he comes. It's no kid-glove proposition. You want to go at him with a huskying-peg, a pitchfork and a kraut maul. But what are you going to do if you're not in fighting trim? But you might as well lie in your bed all your life and expect your muscles to get into a Jess Willard condition as to take no exercise in the work of God and expect to grow strong and vigorous enough to put the devil out of commission.

Standing water always stagnates and so does a standing Christian.

Being a Christian is a good deal like riding a bicycle. You've got to keep a-going or you'll fall off.

I read of a little six-year-old philosopher who fell out of bed and bumped her head on the floor. She sat up and rubbed the sore place and said: "I dess I slept too near where I dot in." Now you've gotten into the Christian life, but if you lie down and go to sleep just where you got in you'll be likely to roll out at the same place.

But you can't push that illustration too far, because the Christian life is no featherbed proposition. Paul says: "Don't go to sleep, but be up and on the job."

Two of the best rules for your Christian life are:

Always witness for Christ. Do this whenever the opportunity comes. You'll be surprised what a difference it makes. Then do it whenever the occasion demands it. Don't allow people to sneer at your Christ and belittle your Lord. When some little lump-headed piece of sophisticated assinity laughs at religion or derides Jesus Christ or gets off a rotten story, don't sit there like a little coward and look sheepish. Rebuke him like a Christian gentleman ought to.

The other rule is to win someone else for Jesus Christ. They saved a fellow from a wreck some time ago and when they got him out he was unconscious, and when they brought him back the first thing he said was, "There's another man." Saved himself his first thought was for somebody else. God give you a spirit like that, and you'll never know what it is to be a Christian until you get it. You'll never know what it is to be happy until you have brought someone else to Jesus Christ and if you die without trying it your last hours will be full of regret.

And now in a single sentence if I were to sum it all up I would say:

Trust and Obey.

Trust. Don't always be doubting your salvation. God says if you would confess and acknowledge His Christ he would save you, and that's enough.

I know I'm saved, not because I feel like it; not because I'm so good, but because thirty years ago I staked my all on his word. My reputation, my character, my soul, my future I piled on top of the Bible and when the Bible goes down and God goes down I'll go down with them.

They obey. In the ultimate it's not your obedience that saves you; it's your faith. Trust Him and He'll make up for all you lack when you come to die. But of course you must do His will. Your obedience is a sign of your faith. Jesus says: "If you love me you will keep my commandments."

What kind of Chistian is the church member who bobs up in church Sunday morning and then takes a header into the world on Monday, going to a dance on Monday night, a vulgar vaudeville on Tuesday night, a beer party on Wednesday night and a game of poker on Thursday night, another dance on Friday night and then turns up in church again on Sunday morning, warms a seat for an hour and a half, drops a little money into the plate and then' off again in the same old way. "Why call me 'Lord, Lord,' and do not the things I say?"

And then keep on going. If you fall don't throw up your hands and quit. I beat Zimmerman in a bicycle race once. It was the year he became world's champion. They gave him

Ethylized Gasoline

For one year and nine months ethylized gasoline has been on sale. It is now being distributed through about 20,000 filling stations covering one-third of the territory of the United States.

About 200,000,000 gallons have been used by more than 1,000,000 motorists with complete safety and satisfaction.

Recently a distressing accident occurred at an experimental plant, where a new process for the manufacture of tetraethyl lead, one of the constituents used in ethylizing gasoline, was under development.

Tetraethyl lead is a poison, as are many raw materials which enter into the manufacture of harmless compounds. Ethylized gasoline consists of 1,300 parts of ordinary gasoline containing less than one part of tetraethyl lead.

This statement is issued to make plain the all-important difference between tetraethyl lead, the raw material, and ethylized gasoline, the commercial product.

Ethylized gasoline is more than an improved fuel, giving smoothness to the motor and eliminating knocks; it is a scientific discovery, which, in its ultimate development, will contribute largely to the conservation of the world's supply of gasoline.

Exhaustive tests have been conducted which have established the safety of ethylized gasoline when used as a motor fuel. These tests have been confirmed by the United States Bureau of Mines, which is making additional studies to determine whether any possible injury can result from continued contact when used for other than motor purposes. Scientific data based on these studies will be submitted to any health commissioner or other public health official on request.

DR. W. E. BIEDERWOLF'S FRIDAY NIGHT SERMON

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, in his sermon Friday evening, said:

Text: Phil 1:6, "Being confident of this very thing, that He who began a good work in you will finish it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Some one has said that when Peter preached in his day it took only one sermon to convert 3,000 sinners, but nowadays it takes 3,000 sermons to convert one sinner and then he usually blackslides.

Of course, that isn't so. The fellow who said it likes to play with words more than he likes to tell the truth. But it is true that the church is in a terribly back-slidden condition. People will take an oath of allegiance and promise of the being of some account to God and the church, but the first thing you know they begin to drift and by and by they are missed from the prayer meeting and then they are missed from the church on Sunday morning, and after a few months more they are back with the old companions, back in the old life, and are lost to God and to the church of God.

I had a friend by the name of Hadley, who ran a mission in New York and a good many of his converts were of this class, and he had so much trouble with them that he said he thought the best way to make sure of them—was to have a guillotine and chop their heads off as fast as they came.

It's a good deal like the Jew and the Irishman who were in a boat and they got to arguing about religion. The Jew stood for the Pentuateuch and Pat, of course, was for the pope and the Catholic church. The discussion got rather warm and in their wrangling they upset the boat and out they both went. Pat could swim, but the Jew couldn't. The Jew went down once and as he came up Pat grabbed him and said, "Now do you believe in the Catholic church?" and the Jew said "No," and Pat let him sink. He came up a second time and Pat said again, "Now will you believe in the Catholic church?" and the Jew spluttered out "No," and down he went again. As he came up for the third and last time, Pat grabbed him and said, "Do you believe in the Catholic church?" and Isaac knew it was all up with him if he didn't, and he said, "Yes, I believe." "Begorra, then," said Pat; "die in the faith," and he shoved him under.

Well, now that's an allright remedy for backsliding, but there are just two things wrong with it.

In the first place it's a dangerous experiment, for if you don't hold out longer than some people do it's a pretty good sign you weren't converted at all. And then what? But in the second place a man's not converted merely to go to heaven when he dies. God wants you to live and amount to something. Don't be what George Eliot in her "Mill of the Floss" calls a "mollycoddle." If you're going to be that sort of a spiritual jelly fish you'll just be washed about with the slow tide and of course you'll never arrive anywhere.

The purpose of this sermon tonight is to help you get started right. I hope every one of you has made up his or her mind to be a gisorous, high-souled Christian man or woman and not a dawdling weakling. You've been floating down stream and now you're going to pull up I know it's harder to pull than it is to float. And now I want to give you a few words of advice. They're out of the word of God, and out of my own experience and I know they'll help you.

Study the Bible.

If you expect to grow you must have the right kind of food and there's nothing so good for newborn children of the Kingdom as the sincere milk and the Simon pure, unadulterated meat of the Word of God.

Get a Bible of your own. And get a good one. Don't buy an expensive hat and a cheap Bible.

Then take every word of it as God's message for you. Never mind what the critics say. No other book has ever withstood such attacks. They've said, "This couldn't be," and "That couldn't be," but every time we've dug up some old tablet or discovered some old monument which showed that it could be and that it was.

I remember when I was a kid they said Jesus never fasted forty days, because no man could go that long without food and not die, but there was a fellow out in Illinois who said he'd try it and see if he couldn't call their bluff. His name was Dr. Tanner. Well, he fasted forty days and then said he'd go them some better, and he never took a bit of grub for 3 days. And the old critics never opened their chops about fasting again.

Backed up by the Spirit of God, Samson one day slew a thousand of his enemies with the jawbone of an ass, but without this backing the higher critic preachers are trying to do the same thing with the same weapon.

Of course, there are things in the Bible you can't understand. It would be surprising if you could. But the Bible is a mine full of rich treasure and the deeper you dig the more you find.

In the Dresden gallery of royal gems is a silver egg and when you touch a spring it opens and discloses a golden chicken, and when you touch the chicken it opens and discloses a crown studded with gems; you touch the crown and it opens and discloses a magnificent diamond ring. And that's the way it is with the Bible. The more you study it the more you touch its successive springs and as you go down into it you will find ever-increasing revelations of duty and wonder richer than the gems from any royal gallery.

Don't Forget To Pray.

There are too many church members that don't know how to pray. About all they know about prayer is what they read in a book or hear the preacher say on Sunday.

Some people pray only when they get scared or get in trouble, but if God ever brings them out it isn't because he is answering their prayers; it's just to give them one more chance to get right with God and amount to something before they die.

Paul says: "Pray without ceasing." Now you can take that in two ways.

It means to hold on to God until you get what you go for. The Bible says: "Knock and it shall be opened unto you." But some of you like the little boys ring a door bell on Hallowe'en night and then run away.

And then it means to keep in touch with Christ; to continue with Him. You can't always be on your knees, but your heart can, and that is the way to get your strength and grace and to get your life transformed.

There was one time a young girl who had a very beautiful character and she was most attractive and people often asked her to tell them the secret of her beautiful life, but every time she would say, "Just wait until I am dead, then pry open the locket that hangs around my neck and you will know the secret," and when she died they pried it open and they found this verse of Scripture, "Whom not having seen I love." It was her communion with God that transformed her life.

You could be a millionaire in grace but most of you are satisfied with being hoboes. You go and beg for crumbs from God's table, but if God had his way with you he'd give you a whole loaf.

If you pray you won't take somebody's piece of hand-painted china because you happened to get four of a kind or some other kind of a lucky hand.

If you pray, people won't look at you and say, "There goes an old skinflint of a deadbeat," because you'll pay your debts.

If you pray, nobody will ever have any occasion to call you beer swillers.

If you pray then you won't go and see a chorus girl flop around with scarcely enough clothes on her to make a stocking for a Lilliputian.

If you pray that's some things you won't do that a lot of you church members are doing now.

There isn't a better song for you to sing than:

"I need Thee every hour,
Stay thou near by;
Temptations lose their power
Where Thou art night."

Give God Benefit of Doubt.

Don't argue with the devil—hit him. He's older than you are and he's liable to get the best of you.

The whole thing is a question of bigness and littleness.

I get disgusted with these church members who are all the time trying to see how much of the world they can hold on to and still be Christians. They say, "Can't I be a Christian and play golf on Sunday? Can't I be a Christian and dance, and can't I drink beer, and can't I do that and still be a Christian?"

Oh, for my sake, if you've got a streak in you like that, get rid of it. That's a piggish disposition. If you'd just need to be carrying slop to it all the time.

Don't try to see how small you can be. I remember in Scranton there was a man who was a dwarf. He worked in the mines and every night about 6 o'clock he would go by the mission where I was preaching. He was a short little fellow and much deformed and had to walk with his head bent far down toward the ground. And every night, with his face all black with coal dust and with his dinner pail in his hand he would go by my place. And I used to feel sorry for him, but oh, I have though so many times since then that I would rather have a dwarfed and puny body if I could have a spirit in it like the spirit of Jesus than to have a big and able body with a soul in it that was dwarfed and shrivelled and atrophied, didn't care to grow and expand and be God-like. And I tell you now the only road to spiritual beauty and satisfaction of soul is the road that leads by the way of the altar and the cross.

And then there is another side to it. It's not so much a question as to whether dancing or beer drinking and some of these things are wrong or right in themselves, but it's a question again of how big or little you are going to be. Something that may not hurt you may hurt somebody else. In Paul's day they sacrificed animals to the heathen gods and then sold the flesh down on the market. Some church members thought Christians ought not to eat because it had been sacrificed to heathen gods. But Paul knew the meat was all right and he must have been down to the market one day to get a chunk of it for dinner and some of the church members saw him going home with it, and they told him they didn't think it was right, and that he ought to set a better example, and Paul said, "The meat was all right, but if some of you fellows with a weak conscience are going to get offended at it, why I'll get along without it." And he threw it down. An old dog grabbed and shot around the corner with it.

Paul said, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world stands." And if any sacrifice that I can make I can help and strengthen and uphold and save a weaker brother, I want to be big enough to make that sacrifice. Don't you?

Join the Church of Your Choice.

You say, "Can't I be a Christian and stay out of the church?" Well, suppose everybody said that? If it's right for one to stay out, it's right for two and if it's right for two it's right for two thousand. And if everybody did like you want to do, we wouldn't have any church at all and we'd have a pretty mess on our hands.

But as far as you are concerned yourself, you'll make the biggest mistake of your life if you don't get into the church just as quick as you possibly can.

A young fellow who walked the aisle one night, said to his father the next day. "I've decided to be a Christian, but why is it necessary to join the church?"

"Well, my son," said the father, "there are a great many reasons why you ought to do it, but come over here and I'll show you one of the biggest ones." They went over to the grate that was full of live coals and the father took the tongs and picked up a coal that was red hot and laid out on the hearth by itself, and as it began to cool off and lose its luster and turn black and get cold the young fellow said, "That's enough, father; me for the church."

Do you see?

Yes, join the church. Don't wait until you find a perfect church for that will be a post-resurrection church sure, and you can't afford to wait that long.

You say, "Which church shall I join?"

Join any of them.

Join the one where most of the people you associate with are members.

Join the one where the rest of your mamily are.

But join any one of them and you'll be a great deal better off than if you don't join at all.

Would you join a church where the pastor played cards and danced and preached little essays and criticised the Bible?

Not on your life.

Well, someone says, "What would you do if you were already a member of a church like that?"

I wouldn't wait to get my hat.

But join the church. You need the church and the church needs you.

The church is the only institution where you are welcome to membership without lying. If you don't pay your dues in the lodge its 23 for you. But I think the church is wrong. You ought not let anybody be a member unless they pay, and I make a rule that every member has to pay one cent a week—at least one cent. Don't tell me you can't pay one cent a week and then go and blow yourself for a sack of peanuts or a nickel show or a dozen other things like that you spend money for. Don't think I'm advocating any penny business for the church; the poorest of you can pay a nickel a week, but its the principle of the thing I'm talking about. They don't need your penny but it's not fair to you to allow you to make a cheap skate out of you. Don't deadbeat your way through the church. Don't be a taightwad. Don't sing through your nose to keep from wearing out your false teeth. I heard of an old sponge in the church who was so stingy that every time they announced "Old Hundred" he would sing "The Ninety and Nine" to save one per cent. You say you're poor. Well, you can give one cent, can's you? Well, then, make a vow to God that you'll give it religiously every week—some definite stated sum, no matter how small, and don't go and warm a seat for an hour and a half and take in all the service and then be so busy blowing your nose when the collection plate comes around that you can't see it. You may think you are worshiping God, but you're only making sport for the devil.

A woman wrote me a letter saying that she didn't feel welcome in the church because she couldn't pay anything and she spent two cents for a stamp to tell me. Why didn't she give that two cents to the church? You don't want to give, that's all.

Now you see what I'm driving at. I am lampooning you church members who can pay and yet go through the whole year and never drop a sourmarkie in the collection plate. If you are going to keep up that kind of business, for heaven's sake the next tive the plate comes around take something out—it's for the heathen anyhow.

If a church has a membership of 300 you'd be surprised to know how many of them go a whole year through and never cough up a red copper. I tell you the church needs training here.

I heard of a little fellow who was in church one Sunday morning with his mother and when the collection was started, to her horror and humiliation she found she had left her pocketbook at home and she said: "Willie, what in the world shall I do?" And Willie said: "Here, mamma, you take my penny and I'll hide under the seat." That little fellow had been so trained in the propriety and decency and good sense of giving that he'd rather hide under the seat than be seen in the house of God without a little something to drop in the collection plate. May the little fellow's tribe increase.

Go To Work.

Do you want to know how to defeat the devil? Well, one way is to keep busy and he won't bother you so much.

The other way is to be fixed for him when he comes. It's no kid-glove proposition. You want to go at him with a huskying-peg, a pitchfork and a kraut maul. But what are you going to do if you're not in fighting trim? But you might as well lie in your bed all your life and expect your muscles to get into a Jess Willard condition as to take no exercise in the work of God and expect to grow strong and vigorous enough to put the devil out of commission.

Standing water always stagnates and so does a standing Christian.

Being a Christian is a good deal like riding a bicycle. You've got to keep a-going or you'll fall off.

I read of a little six-year-old philosopher who fell out of bed and bumped her head on the floor. She sat up and rubbed the sore place and said: "I dess I slept too near where I dot in." Now you've gotten into the Christian life, but if you lie down and go to sleep just where you got in you'll be likely to roll out at the same place.

But you can't push that illustration too far, because the Christian life is no featherbed proposition. Paul says: "Don't go to sleep, but be up and on the job."

Two of the best rules for your Christian life are:

Always witness for Christ. Do this whenever the opportunity comes. You'll be surprised what a difference it makes. Then do it whenever the occasion demands it. Don't allow people to sneer at your Christ and belittle your Lord. When some little lump-headed piece of sophisticated assinity laughs at religion or derides Jesus Christ or gets off a rotten story, don't sit there like a little coward and look sheepish. Rebuke him like a Christian gentleman ought to.

The other rule is to win someone else for Jesus Christ. They saved a fellow from a wreck some time ago and when they got him out he was unconscious, and when they brought him back the first thing he said was, "There's another man." Saved himself his first thought was for somebody else. God give you a spirit like that, and you'll never know what it is to be a Christian until you get it. You'll never know what it is to be happy until you have brought someone else to Jesus Christ and if you die without trying it your last hours will be full of regret.

And now in a single sentence if I were to sum it all up I would say:

Trust and Obey.

Trust. Don't always be doubting your salvation. God says if you would confess and acknowledge His Christ he would save you, and that's enough.

I know I'm saved, not because I feel like it; not because I'm so good, but because thirty years ago I staked my all on his word. My reputation, my character, my soul, my future I piled on top of the Bible and when the Bible goes down and God goes down I'll go down with them.

They obey. In the ultimate it's not your obedience that saves you; it's your faith. Trust Him and He'll make up for all you lack when you come to die. But of course you must do His will. Your obedience is a sign of your faith. Jesus says: "If you love me you will keep my commandments."

What kind of Chistian is the church member who bobs up in church Sunday morning and then takes a header into the world on Monday, going to a dance on Monday night, a vulgar vaudeville on Tuesday night, a beer party on Wednesday night and a game of poker on Thursday night, another dance on Friday night and then turns up in church again on Sunday morning, warms a seat for an hour and a half, drops a little money into the plate and then' off again in the same old way. "Why call me 'Lord, Lord,' and do not the things I say?"

And then keep on going. If you fall don't throw up your hands and quit. I beat Zimmerman in a bicycle race once. It was the year he became world's champion. They gave him

Ethylized Gasoline

For one year and nine months ethylized gasoline has been on sale. It is now being distributed through about 20,000 filling stations covering one-third of the territory of the United States.

About 200,000,000 gallons have been used by more than 1,000,000 motorists with complete safety and satisfaction.

Recently a distressing accident occurred at an experimental plant, where a new process for the manufacture of tetraethyl lead, one of the constituents used in ethylizing gasoline, was under development.

Tetraethyl lead is a poison, as are many raw materials which enter into the manufacture of harmless compounds. Ethylized gasoline consists of 1,300 parts of ordinary gasoline containing less than one part of tetraethyl lead.

This statement is issued to make plain the all-important difference between tetraethyl lead, the raw material, and ethylized gasoline, the commercial product.

Ethylized gasoline is more than an improved fuel, giving smoothness to the motor and eliminating knocks; it is a scientific discovery, which, in its ultimate development, will contribute largely to the conservation of the world's supply of gasoline.

Exhaustive tests have been conducted which have established the safety of ethylized gasoline when used as a motor fuel. These tests have been confirmed by the United States Bureau of Mines, which is making additional studies to determine whether any possible injury can result from continued contact when used for other than motor purposes. Scientific data based on these studies will be submitted to any health commissioner or other public health official on request.

He rode what they called a Star wheel—a bicycle with the little wheel in front and a big one behind. His feet didn't go around with the crank, but he pedaled up and down.

It was the opening race at Princeton university. Tavis and Muryhy, two of the greatest riders in America, were there. They had gone into training early and Zimmerman just same over to open the season and see what he could go with them, but he hadn't done any training yet and so was no match for them. I had never been in a race that amounted to anything. I was what they called an amateur and so they gave me a handicap. You know what that is, don't you? They put me about a mile and a half around the track before they started—gave me that much of a start. Well, the pistol cracked and we commenced to peddle. I heard something go "phizz" and I looked up and saw Taxis go by me and then about 20 seconds later and "phizz," Muryhy went by me, and then it seemed like it was only about five seconds and something else went "phizz" and I looked up and saw Zimmerman shoot by me. But I just kept on and pretty soon Zimmerman saw he could not catch the other two fellows and he got off his wheel and stood by the road side of the track and in a little while "phizz," I went right by Zimmerman, and when the judges called out the winners it was race.

Taxis, first; Murphy second; Biederwolf, third, and Zimmerman, fourth. I beat him. He didn't stay in the race.

Keep on going. You know Paul says there is a prize for every one who stays in the race to the end.

And now I wonder how many of you other people want to join this great crowd and go with us in the Christian way. I thing it would be better for some of you never to have been born than to have lived in East Liverpool in days like these and not have stepped over into the Kingdom of God. You know you've sinned; you know your sin will lose for you your soul; you don't want to die without Christ. Then why live without Him?

Some of you tonight are like the man in the flood. It was when the Allegheny and the Monongahela rivers went on a rampage. The people saw him swept down the current holding on to the roof of an old shed. They ran out on a bridge and let down a rope but as he came sweeping along he thought, "If I let go the roof and miss the rope I a miost," and to he held on with one hand and reached for the rope with the other, but missed it. They ran to the other side of the bridge and shouted, "There is another bridge below," and he missed it again in the same way because he was afraid to run the risk. They ran to the other side of the bridge and shouted. "There's just one more bridge below; there's just one more bridge below," as he came along to the last bridge, he said, "If I miss the rope this time I am lost anyway," and so as he swept up to it he let go with both hands and reached out and caught the rope and they pulled him up and saved his life. And there are some here tonight and bridge after bridge has been passed, rope after rope has been thrown out, call after call, invitation after invitation, just one more rope, and to miss it now is to be swept away and to be lost forever. God help you to catch hold of the lifeline tonight.

All America Has Taken The Chrysler To Its Heart

The Chrysler Six sells itself every time it exhibits its dashing appearance on road or highway. The contrast between it and other cars is so marked that the desire to own one is bred then and there. But that desire is as nothing compared to the delight induced later on. If its only charm were the charm of appearance, the attraction would soon wear off. But the Chrysler is just as unusually attractive as it looks. One after another it reveals these unusual qualities even before it gets under way. Just to sit in the car and look about reveals first a quality all Americans love—compactness, conservation of space, neatness, artistry and a complete elimination of unnecessary elements. You look up from the cradling comfort of the Chrysler as you pass other cars and almost laugh. You see needless height, needless bulk, needless weight, needless length as you never saw them before. Your motor is as compact as the car itself—a jewelled watch with the busiest, most alert, most effective flow of power you ever experienced. Your whole motoring world is changed for you—delightfully changed, economically changed, efficiently changed. That the American people have taken the Chrysler to their hearts is no surprise at all—it is a very natural, logical thing. They are almost extravagantly enthusiastic about the Chrysler because the Chrysler has shown them delights in motoring they have never known before.

All America Has Taken The Chrysler To Its Heart

The Chrysler Six sells itself every time it exhibits its dashing appearance on road or highway. The contrast between it and other cars is so marked that the desire to own one is bred then and there. But that desire is as nothing compared to the delight induced later on. If its only charm were the charm of appearance, the attraction would soon wear off. But the Chrysler is just as unusually attractive as it looks. One after another it reveals these unusual qualities even before it gets under way. Just to sit in the car and look about reveals first a quality all Americans love—compactness, conservation of space, neatness, artistry and a complete elimination of unnecessary elements. You look up from the cradling comfort of the Chrysler as you pass other cars and almost laugh. You see needless height, needless bulk, needless weight, needless length as you never saw them before. Your motor is as compact as the car itself—a jewelled watch with the busiest, most alert, most effective flow of power you ever experienced. Your whole motoring world is changed for you—delightfully changed, economically changed, efficiently changed. That the American people have taken the Chrysler to their hearts is no surprise at all—it is a very natural, logical thing. They are almost extravagantly enthusiastic about the Chrysler because the Chrysler has shown them delights in motoring they have never known before.

WEIRTON SEEKS MORE POLICEMEN

Weirton merchants and officials at a recent meeting discussed the proposal of increasing the night police force to five men. This move follows the roundup of a gang of youthful robbers who confessed to taking part in more than 45 jobs.

The looting of the past few months stirred up residents of the town, and the proposal to add three more officers has met with general approval.

The matter will be laid before council at its meeting early next week.

spans of horses, loads of presents and showered him with gold wherever he went. He was about the greatest pedaler the world has ever seen. He rode what they called a Star wheel—a bicycle with the little wheel in front and a big one behind. His feet didn't go around with the crank, but he pedaled up and down.

It was the opening race at Princeton university. Tavis and Muryhy, two of the greatest riders in America, were there. They had gone into training early and Zimmerman just same over to open the season and see what he could go with them, but he hadn't done any training yet and so was no match for them. I had never been in a race that amounted to anything. I was what they called an amateur and so they gave me a handicap. You know what that is, don't you? They put me about a mile and a half around the track before they started—gave me that much of a start. Well, the pistol cracked and we commenced to peddle. I heard something go "phizz" and I looked up and saw Taxis go by me and then about 20 seconds later and "phizz," Muryhy went by me, and then it seemed like it was only about five seconds and something else went "phizz" and I looked up and saw Zimmerman shoot by me. But I just kept on and pretty soon Zimmerman saw he could not catch the other two fellows and he got off his wheel and stood by the road side of the track and in a little while "phizz," I went right by Zimmerman, and when the judges called out the winners it was race.

Taxis, first; Murphy second; Biederwolf, third, and Zimmerman, fourth. I beat him. He didn't stay in the race.

Keep on going. You know Paul says there is a prize for every one who stays in the race to the end.

And now I wonder how many of you other people want to join this great crowd and go with us in the Christian way. I thing it would be better for some of you never to have been born than to have lived in East Liverpool in days like these and not have stepped over into the Kingdom of God. You know you've sinned; you know your sin will lose for you your soul; you don't want to die without Christ. Then why live without Him?

Some of you tonight are like the man in the flood. It was when the Allegheny and the Monongahela rivers went on a rampage. The people saw him swept down the current holding on to the roof of an old shed. They ran out on a bridge and let down a rope but as he came sweeping along he thought, "If I let go the roof and miss the rope I a miost," and to he held on with one hand and reached for the rope with the other, but missed it. They ran to the other side of the bridge and shouted, "There is another bridge below," and he missed it again in the same way because he was afraid to run the risk. They ran to the other side of the bridge and shouted. "There's just one more bridge below; there's just one more bridge below," as he came along to the last bridge, he said, "If I miss the rope this time I am lost anyway," and so as he swept up to it he let go with both hands and reached out and caught the rope and they pulled him up and saved his life. And there are some here tonight and bridge after bridge has been passed, rope after rope has been thrown out, call after call, invitation after invitation, just one more rope, and to miss it now is to be swept away and to be lost forever. God help you to catch hold of the lifeline tonight.

They get their share of good fresh air who sleep on frosty porches.

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

The last witness the defense produced was Herbert Colt. He was thirty years old, a powerfully built man, tall and muscular, and noticeable because of an unusually long rough-featured face and small eyes. He had been a strike-breaker during the great Proctorville strike; later he had gone to New York and had set up as a private detective and—through Dascome's recommendation — had worked for various lawyers and private individuals. It was he who had hunted down Bain Atwell for Dascome after the Devereux trial.

Herbert Colt substantiated Dascome's testimony regarding Bain Atwell and Dascome's sending him to Proctorville to locate the man. Colt's version of their conversations over long distance tallied with Dascome's account; nothing had been said about Mr. Proctor. Colt deposed that he had known nothing about Mr. Proctor's illness and death until he saw the evening papers, several hours after he had sent his last telephone message to Dascome. Colt swore that he had not sent the telegram signed "Herbert Colt;" that he did not know who had sent it! that he had known nothing about it until he had left Proctorville and had come to New York, when Dascome's counsel had questioned him about it.

Colt declared that he had not been in hiding or sequestered in any way, that he had simply been searching the country for Atwell; that he had been in California, Canada and Mexico.

The prosecution asked, "You were employed by the defense then?"

"I was not," Colt answered curtly. "I was on my own. I guessed Atwell knew something about that affair at Crisomby Lake. 'Twould have been a feather in my cap if I could have produced him. I was convinced Dascome never murdered his wife."

The prosecution then called several witnesses in rebuttal: a night watchman for the Cullum street district, which is the mill tenement district of Proctorville; a man named Ephraim Norkoff, whose small tailor shop backed on the alley which ran between his hop and the Cates House, where Herbert Proctor stayed when in Proctorville; and the butler from Proctor house.

The night watchman deposed that he knew John Dascome well by sight; that at midnight, on April the seventh, Dascome passed him on Cullum street, near the Cates House; that he saw Dascome go into the Cates House alley. He had not followed him.

The tailor, Norkoff, deposed that at midnight on April the seventh he had just turned out the light in his back room and was about to draw down the shade when he saw a man lift the window of one of the rooms in the Cates House, then climb in. Then the window was lowered and the shade drawn. He went out then into the alley and, though he could not see beneath the shade, there was a tear in the shade through which he could see very well. He said that questionable characters put up at the Cates House, so he had no compunction in spying. He stated that he knew Herbert Colt very well by sight, also that he knew John Dascome, Amos Proctor's son-in-law. He said that Colt and Dascome sat close together and that Dascome was talking earnestly and very low, and Colt talking occasionally. Then Dascome gave a roll of bills to Colt.

Norkoff stated that he had thought it one of his business and he had said nothing about it until he heard about the murder; then he had told a neighbor and it had spread in the neighborhood. Norkoff was a small man, bow-legged, pale and thin; his large eager eyes and pallor made him pathetic. His parents had been mill hands; he was a child of the mills; their stamp was on him, face and body.

The Proctor house butler deposed that Mr. Dascome had gone out at about 11 o'clock on the night of April the seventh, shortly after the word had come about Elaine Dascome's disappearance, and that Dascome did not return to Proctor house until just before morning.

Both Dascome and Colt had sworn that they had not seen each other since the morning of April the third, when Dascome had sent Colt to Proctorville. The tailor, Norkoff, swore that he saw them in secret conference on the night of the seventh. It rested with the jury to decide which had told the truth.

IV

The prosecution argued that Dascome was fully acquainted with the provisions of Amos Procto's will before he took his wife to Crisomby Lakes and destroyed her; also that he knew of Amos Proctor's illness and death; that he was in a frame of mind to be rid of her at any cost. That Herbert Colt had acted as Dascome's spy and informer in Proctorville, and that as soon as Dascome knew that Amos Proctor had had a heart attack which would, in all probability, prove fatal, he had gone to his wife, who was in terror of him, and had forced her to go to Crisomby with him. That there he haid waited for further information.

They claimed that as soon as Dascome learned from Herbert Colt that Amos Proctor was dead, he took his wife out on the lake and there he attacked her; that her half-smothered scream, which was answered by Jimmy Calhoun, had caused Dascome to complete his work in frantic haste. That he had flung his wife into the lake and he himself had plunged into the water and, to escape observation, swam under water to the shelter of the willows where he hid until Jimmy Calhoun had gone, when he swam to a more possible landing place and hurried back to his house with the tale that he had fallen into the lake.

The prosecution claimed that the unexpected presence of Jimmy Calhoun had entirely upset Dascome's plans; that, in consequence, he had been unable to make the disappearance of his wife appear as either an accident, or a suicide, and he had been forced to face the damning evidence against him. That his next hurried move had been to hasten to Proctorville and confer with Herbert Colt. The prosecution did not claim that Colt was accessory to the murder, but they maintained that certainly there was a secret understanding between the two men and that Dascome had paid money to Herbert Colt. The prosecution claimed that the mention of Bain Atwell, whom the defense had not produced, was designed to create the impression that some other agent than Dascome had committed the murder.

WEIRTON SEEKS MORE POLICEMEN

Weirton merchants and officials at a recent meeting discussed the proposal of increasing the night police force to five men. This move follows the roundup of a gang of youthful robbers who confessed to taking part in more than 45 jobs.

The looting of the past few months stirred up residents of the town, and the proposal to add three more officers has met with general approval.

The matter will be laid before council at its meeting early next week.

spans of horses, loads of presents and showered him with gold wherever he went. He was about the greatest pedaler the world has ever seen. He rode what they called a Star wheel—a bicycle with the little wheel in front and a big one behind. His feet didn't go around with the crank, but he pedaled up and down.

It was the opening race at Princeton university. Tavis and Muryhy, two of the greatest riders in America, were there. They had gone into training early and Zimmerman just same over to open the season and see what he could go with them, but he hadn't done any training yet and so was no match for them. I had never been in a race that amounted to anything. I was what they called an amateur and so they gave me a handicap. You know what that is, don't you? They put me about a mile and a half around the track before they started—gave me that much of a start. Well, the pistol cracked and we commenced to peddle. I heard something go "phizz" and I looked up and saw Taxis go by me and then about 20 seconds later and "phizz," Muryhy went by me, and then it seemed like it was only about five seconds and something else went "phizz" and I looked up and saw Zimmerman shoot by me. But I just kept on and pretty soon Zimmerman saw he could not catch the other two fellows and he got off his wheel and stood by the road side of the track and in a little while "phizz," I went right by Zimmerman, and when the judges called out the winners it was race.

Taxis, first; Murphy second; Biederwolf, third, and Zimmerman, fourth. I beat him. He didn't stay in the race.

Keep on going. You know Paul says there is a prize for every one who stays in the race to the end.

And now I wonder how many of you other people want to join this great crowd and go with us in the Christian way. I thing it would be better for some of you never to have been born than to have lived in East Liverpool in days like these and not have stepped over into the Kingdom of God. You know you've sinned; you know your sin will lose for you your soul; you don't want to die without Christ. Then why live without Him?

Some of you tonight are like the man in the flood. It was when the Allegheny and the Monongahela rivers went on a rampage. The people saw him swept down the current holding on to the roof of an old shed. They ran out on a bridge and let down a rope but as he came sweeping along he thought, "If I let go the roof and miss the rope I a miost," and to he held on with one hand and reached for the rope with the other, but missed it. They ran to the other side of the bridge and shouted, "There is another bridge below," and he missed it again in the same way because he was afraid to run the risk. They ran to the other side of the bridge and shouted. "There's just one more bridge below; there's just one more bridge below," as he came along to the last bridge, he said, "If I miss the rope this time I am lost anyway," and so as he swept up to it he let go with both hands and reached out and caught the rope and they pulled him up and saved his life. And there are some here tonight and bridge after bridge has been passed, rope after rope has been thrown out, call after call, invitation after invitation, just one more rope, and to miss it now is to be swept away and to be lost forever. God help you to catch hold of the lifeline tonight.

They get their share of good fresh air who sleep on frosty porches.

All America Has Taken The Chrysler To Its Heart

The Chrysler Six sells itself every time it exhibits its dashing appearance on road or highway. The contrast between it and other cars is so marked that the desire to own one is bred then and there. But that desire is as nothing compared to the delight induced later on. If its only charm were the charm of appearance, the attraction would soon wear off. But the Chrysler is just as unusually attractive as it looks. One after another it reveals these unusual qualities even before it gets under way. Just to sit in the car and look about reveals first a quality all Americans love—compactness, conservation of space, neatness, artistry and a complete elimination of unnecessary elements. You look up from the cradling comfort of the Chrysler as you pass other cars and almost laugh. You see needless height, needless bulk, needless weight, needless length as you never saw them before. Your motor is as compact as the car itself—a jewelled watch with the busiest, most alert, most effective flow of power you ever experienced. Your whole motoring world is changed for you—delightfully changed, economically changed, efficiently changed. That the American people have taken the Chrysler to their hearts is no surprise at all—it is a very natural, logical thing. They are almost extravagantly enthusiastic about the Chrysler because the Chrysler has shown them delights in motoring they have never known before.

THE DOUBLE HOUSE

By Elizabeth Dejeans

The last witness the defense produced was Herbert Colt. He was thirty years old, a powerfully built man, tall and muscular, and noticeable because of an unusually long rough-featured face and small eyes. He had been a strike-breaker during the great Proctorville strike; later he had gone to New York and had set up as a private detective and—through Dascome's recommendation — had worked for various lawyers and private individuals. It was he who had hunted down Bain Atwell for Dascome after the Devereux trial.

Herbert Colt substantiated Dascome's testimony regarding Bain Atwell and Dascome's sending him to Proctorville to locate the man. Colt's version of their conversations over long distance tallied with Dascome's account; nothing had been said about Mr. Proctor. Colt deposed that he had known nothing about Mr. Proctor's illness and death until he saw the evening papers, several hours after he had sent his last telephone message to Dascome. Colt swore that he had not sent the telegram signed "Herbert Colt;" that he did not know who had sent it; that he had known nothing about it until he had left Proctorville and had come to New York, when Dascome's counsel had questioned him about it.

Colt declared that he had not been in hiding or sequestered in any way, that he had simply been searching the country for Atwell; that he had been in California, Canada and Mexico.

The prosecution asked, "You were employed by the defense then?"

"I was not," Colt answered curtly. "I was on my own. I guessed Atwell knew something about that affair at Crisomby Lake. 'Twould have been a feather in my cap if I could have produced him. I was convinced Dascome never murdered his wife."

The prosecution then called several witnesses in rebuttal: a night watchman for the Cullum street district, which is the mill tenement district of Proctorville; a man named Ephraim Norkoff, whose small tailor shop backed on the alley which ran between his hop and the Cates House, where Herbert Proctor stayed when in Proctorville; and the butler from Proctor house.

The night watchman deposed that he knew John Dascome well by sight; that at midnight, on April the seventh, Dascome passed him on Cullum street, near the Cates House; that he saw Dascome go into the Cates House alley. He had not followed him.

The tailor, Norkoff, deposed that at midnight on April the seventh he had just turned out the light in his back room and was about to draw down the shade when he saw a man lift the window of one of the rooms in the Cates House, then climb in. Then the window was lowered and the shade drawn. He went out then into the alley and, though he could not see beneath the shade, there was a tear in the shade through which he could see very well. He said that questionable characters put up at the Cates House, so he had no compunction in spying. He stated that he knew Herbert Colt very well by sight, also that he knew John Dascome, Amos Proctor's son-in-law. He said that Colt and Dascome sat close together and that Dascome was talking earnestly and very low, and Colt talking occasionally. Then Dascome gave a roll of bills to Colt.

Norkoff stated that he had thought it one of his business and he had said nothing about it until he heard about the murder; then he had told a neighbor and it had spread in the neighborhood. Norkoff was a small man, bow-legged, pale and thin; his large eager eyes and pallor made him pathetic. His parents had been mill hands; he was a child of the mills; their stamp was on him, face and body.

The Proctor house butler deposed that Mr. Dascome had gone out at about 11 o'clock on the night of April the seventh, shortly after the word had come about Elaine Dascome's disappearance, and that Dascome did not return to Proctor house until just before morning.

Both Dascome and Colt had sworn that they had not seen each other since the morning of April the third, when Dascome had sent Colt to Proctorville. The tailor, Norkoff, swore that he saw them in secret conference on the night of the seventh. It rested with the jury to decide which had told the truth.

IV

The prosecution argued that Dascome was fully acquainted with the provisions of Amos Procto's will before he took his wife to Crisomby Lakes and destroyed her; also that he knew of Amos Proctor's illness and death; that he was in a frame of mind to be rid of her at any cost. That Herbert Colt had acted as Dascome's spy and informer in Proctorville, and that as soon as Dascome knew that Amos Proctor had had a heart attack which would, in all probability, prove fatal, he had gone to his wife, who was in terror of him, and had forced her to go to Crisomby with him. That there he haid waited for further information.

They claimed that as soon as Dascome learned from Herbert Colt that Amos Proctor was dead, he took his wife out on the lake and there he attacked her; that her half-smothered scream, which was answered by Jimmy Calhoun, had caused Dascome to complete his work in frantic haste. That he had flung his wife into the lake and he himself had plunged into the water and, to escape observation, swam under water to the shelter of the willows where he hid until Jimmy Calhoun had gone, when he swam to a more possible landing place and hurried back to his house with the tale that he had fallen into the lake.

The prosecution claimed that the unexpected presence of Jimmy Calhoun had entirely upset Dascome's plans; that, in consequence, he had been unable to make the disappearance of his wife appear as either an accident, or a suicide, and he had been forced to face the damning evidence against him. That his next hurried move had been to hasten to Proctorville and confer with Herbert Colt. The prosecution did not claim that Colt was accessory to the murder, but they maintained that certainly there was a secret understanding between the two men and that Dascome had paid money to Herbert Colt. The prosecution claimed that the mention of Bain Atwell, whom the defense had not produced, was designed to create the impression that some other agent than Dascome had committed the murder.

The last witness the defense produced was Herbert Colt. He was thirty years old, a powerfully built man, tall and muscular, and noticeable because of an unusually long rough-featured face and small eyes. He had been a strike-breaker during the great Proctorville strike; later he had gone to New York and had set up as a private detective and—through Dascome's recommendation — had worked for various lawyers and private individuals. It was he who had hunted down Bain Atwell for Dascome after the Devereux trial.

Herbert Colt substantiated Dascome's testimony regarding Bain Atwell and Dascome's sending him to Proctorville to locate the man. Colt's version of their conversations over long distance tallied with Dascome's account; nothing had been said about Mr. Proctor. Colt deposed that he had known nothing about Mr. Proctor's illness and death until he saw the evening papers, several hours after he had sent his last telephone message to Dascome. Colt swore that he had not sent the telegram signed "Herbert Colt;" that he did not know who had sent it! that he had known nothing about it until he had left Proctorville and had come to New York, when Dascome's counsel had questioned him about it.

Colt declared that he had not been in hiding or sequestered in any way, that he had simply been searching the country for Atwell; that he had been in California, Canada and Mexico.

The prosecution asked, "You were employed by the defense then?"

"I was not," Colt answered curtly. "I was on my own. I guessed Atwell knew something about that affair at Crisomby Lake. 'Twould have been a feather in my cap if I could have produced him. I was convinced Dascome never murdered his wife."

The prosecution then called several witnesses in rebuttal: a night watchman for the Cullum street district, which is the mill tenement district of Proctorville; a man named Ephraim Norkoff, whose small tailor shop backed on the alley which ran between his hop and the Cates House, where Herbert Proctor stayed when in Proctorville; and the butler from Proctor house.

The night watchman deposed that he knew John Dascome well by sight; that at midnight, on April the seventh, Dascome passed him on Cullum street, near the Cates House; that he saw Dascome go into the Cates House alley. He had not followed him.

The tailor, Norkoff, deposed that at midnight on April the seventh he had just turned out the light in his back room and was about to draw down the shade when he saw a man lift the window of one of the rooms in the Cates House, then climb in. Then the window was lowered and the shade drawn. He went out then into the alley and, though he could not see beneath the shade, there was a tear in the shade through which he could see very well. He said that questionable characters put up at the Cates House, so he had no compunction in spying. He stated that he knew Herbert Colt very well by sight, also that he knew John Dascome, Amos Proctor's son-in-law. He said that Colt and Dascome sat close together and that Dascome was talking earnestly and very low, and Colt talking occasionally. Then Dascome gave a roll of bills to Colt.

Norkoff stated that he had thought it one of his business and he had said nothing about it until he heard about the murder; then he had told a neighbor and it had spread in the neighborhood. Norkoff was a small man, bow-legged, pale and thin; his large eager eyes and pallor made him pathetic. His parents had been mill hands; he was a child of the mills; their stamp was on him, face and body.

The Proctor house butler deposed that Mr. Dascome had gone out at about 11 o'clock on the night of April the seventh, shortly after the word had come about Elaine Dascome's disappearance, and that Dascome did not return to Proctor house until just before morning.

Both Dascome and Colt had sworn that they had not seen each other since the morning of April the third, when Dascome had sent Colt to Proctorville. The tailor, Norkoff, swore that he saw them in secret conference on the night of the seventh. It rested with the jury to decide which had told the truth.

IV

The prosecution argued that Dascome was fully acquainted with the provisions of Amos Procto's will before he took his wife to Crisomby Lakes and destroyed her; also that he knew of Amos Proctor's illness and death; that he was in a frame of mind to be rid of her at any cost. That Herbert Colt had acted as Dascome's spy and informer in Proctorville, and that as soon as Dascome knew that Amos Proctor had had a heart attack which would, in all probability, prove fatal, he had gone to his wife, who was in terror of him, and had forced her to go to Crisomby with him. That there he haid waited for further information.

They claimed that as soon as Dascome learned from Herbert Colt that Amos Proctor was dead, he took his wife out on the lake and there he attacked her; that her half-smothered scream, which was answered by Jimmy Calhoun, had caused Dascome to complete his work in frantic haste. That he had flung his wife into the lake and he himself had plunged into the water and, to escape observation, swam under water to the shelter of the willows where he hid until Jimmy Calhoun had gone, when he swam to a more possible landing place and hurried back to his house with the tale that he had fallen into the lake.

The prosecution claimed that the unexpected presence of Jimmy Calhoun had entirely upset Dascome's plans; that, in consequence, he had been unable to make the disappearance of his wife appear as either an accident, or a suicide, and he had been forced to face the damning evidence against him. That his next hurried move had been to hasten to Proctorville and confer with Herbert Colt. The prosecution did not claim that Colt was accessory to the murder, but they maintained that certainly there was a secret understanding between the two men and that Dascome had paid money to Herbert Colt. The prosecution claimed that the mention of Bain Atwell, whom the defense had not produced, was designed to create the impression that some other agent than Dascome had committed the murder.

Service Elevens Will Battle Today For Gridiron Supremacy

Army Squad Slight Favorite Although Mud Favors Middies

Navy Tipped as Favoring Forward Pass Play as Long as Weather Justifies; Doughboys can Summon Much Better Running Attack.

By Davis J. Walsh.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—Just as the assassin's bullet at Sarajevo was the shot that was heard around the world, the shrill, staccato music of a referee's whistle, sounded at the hour of two this afternoon will send its message to the nethermost outposts of the known universe.

Out along the air currents of the ocean it will go and army officers in a lonely post in the Philippines will share its secret with those patrolling the deck of a navy cruiser in the North Sea. They will know that the annual Army and Navy football game, their big moment of a drab, serene year of peace has started with its usual rush of desperate play and colorful incident.

It was to be the first time the locale had been laid south of the Mason and Dixon line since 1893 and a goodly crowd was there. Some of our best people, including President and Mrs. Coolidge, members of the cabinet, admirals, generals and what not, were to be among those present. Also some of our worst, including ticket speculators, gentlemen bootleggers, and the usual human flotsam that follows an event of this kind.

The local stadium has an estimated capacity of 80,000 and, rain or shine, every seat will have its occupant when the referee plays the tune so alluring to the ear of far-off service men, whom duty claims over desire. The official forecast was for a clear day, although early indications carried a threat of rain. A storm last night left the field slightly heavy, a Navy advantage.

It was one of the few advantages the Navy carried in the pre-game calculations. The Army with the better kicking and running game and a fine defensive center trio, was a 2 to 1 shot to win. On its record alone West Point appears to be best, a defeat by Notre Dame being its only reverse of the season.

The navy on the other hand, had finished second to Marquette, Penn State, Bucknell, Princeton and West Virginia Wesleyan, a record that has made every navy man a chronic misanthropist. But upsets will be upsets as the concluding season has amply provided. Furthermore, every army and navy game is a thing apart and all that has preceded it may be thrown out the window. The navy may lose today, but if so it will go down with its boots on.

A desicion either way will break a long standing tie each team having won 12 games and two resulting in tie scores, one of which occurred last year. This dead heat condition of affairs should be sufficient indication that no odds are justified on army and navy football games. The navy, for example, has hardly been the favored team at any time during the last five years yet it has more than held its own over that period. It might be mentioned also that it has summoned three veterans, Shapely, Flippin and Lentz from the ineligible loist for the occasion in question. They will make a great difference in the navy's play.

The fact that the Middies will step out for the game in more or less familiar surroundings will have little effect on the outcome, although Baltimore, playing host to its first service game, is markedly sympathetic to the navy cause.

The real navy ally is the heavy field. Here the ponderous navy team, outweighing the army twelve pounds on the individual hoof can make use of its superior weight. A sustained rain would just about level everything, including the fact that West Point has Wilson, all American half-back, Wood, Gilmore and Hewitt, a much better running attack than navy can hope to muster.

The only factor that bad weather conditions cannot affect is the superior punting of Wood who figured to outkick any man the navy nominated. But this advantage did not figure to be great in any case, owing to the fact that the navy ends were expected to cover punts better than their army opponents, who with the tackles were the only weak links in the army chain.

Duly apprised of this fact, Navy's strategy would seem to call for a running attack off tackle, but it is understood that such will be far from the case. The tip is that the Navy will play a passing game as long as the weather justified this maneuvre. The probable lineup:

Army	Position	Navy
Baxter	L.E.	Taylor
Griffith	L.T.	Wickhorst

ROCKNE ELEVEN IN PITTSBURGH

Carnegie Tech to Close Season With Notre Dame.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 29—The football season will end here this afternoon when Carnegie Tech meets the unbeaten Notre Dame team before what will be, it is predicted, the largest crowd ever assembled at Forbes Field. Every seat has been sold and demands for seats were still being received by the Tech Athletic officials this morning.

It was snowing here early today, and when the whistle blows at 2 o'clock this afternoon Tech and the Irish will start the game on a snow covered field with a strong Southwest wind blowing, according to the local weather man.

Elmer Layden, Notre Dame's star full back, will not be in the game this afternoon, declared Coach Rockne, on account of a sprained ligament after the Northwestern game last week. Cerney, one of Rockne's second string backs will take the field along with the other "Horsemen."

Tech is in perfect condition, according to their Coach, and it is said that those who do not concede the "Skibos" even a fighting chance are likely to be surprised.

By the count of 39 to 31, the Laughlin No. 6 passers of the "Y" industrial league triumphed over the Potters Co-Operatives last night at the Y. M. C. C. gym, with Forward Webb and his nine field goals figuring very much in the victory.

The failure of the Potters to stop Webb was the cause of their downfall, although the victors, as a general rule played basketball of high quality, and judging by the score, quantity, as well Jester and Duffy also was in the game for the winners, contributing 18 points to the total, while Harker and McGuiness put up good guard games.

Wallace and Hamilton were the sterling performers for the Potters, scoring all but six of the team's 31 points.

The Laughlins led by the score of 8 to 5 at the end of the opening period and was on top with the count of 17 to 11 at the end of the half. They maintained their position during the third and final cantos.

These games were originally scheduled for Oct. 31 and the teams had not been able to get them played off before the end of the first part of the schedule. The standing accordingly is:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Laughlin 6	13	5	.722
Smith Phillips	15	6	.714
Laughlin 5	12	6	.666
Decorators	14	7	.666
Adamant	13	8	.619
Laughlin, E. E.	5	13	.277
B. & W.	4	17	.191

The local stadium has an estimated capacity of 80,000 and, rain or shine, every seat will have its occupant when the referee plays the tune so alluring to the ear of far-off service men, whom duty claims over desire. The official forecast was for a clear day, although early indications carried a threat of rain. A storm last night left the field slightly heavy, a Navy advantage.

It was one of the few advantages the Navy carried in the pre-game calculations. The Army with the better kicking and running game and a fine defensive center trio, was a 2 to 1 shot to win. On its record alone West Point appears to be best, a defeat by Notre Dame being its only reverse of the season.

The navy on the other hand, had finished second to Marquette, Penn State, Bucknell, Princeton and West Virginia Wesleyan, a record that has made every navy man a chronic misanthropist. But upsets will be upsets as the concluding season has amply provided. Furthermore, every army and navy game is a thing apart and all that has preceded it may be thrown out the window. The navy may lose today, but if so it will go down with its boots on.

A desicion either way will break a long standing tie each team having won 12 games and two resulting in tie scores, one of which occurred last year. This dead heat condition of affairs should be sufficient indication that no odds are justified on army and navy football games. The navy, for example, has hardly been the favored team at any time during the last five years yet it has more than held its own over that period. It might be mentioned also that it has summoned three veterans, Shapely, Flippin and Lentz from the ineligible loist for the occasion in question. They will make a great difference in the navy's play.

The fact that the Middies will step out for the game in more or less familiar surroundings will have little effect on the outcome, although Baltimore, playing host to its first service game, is markedly sympathetic to the navy cause.

The real navy ally is the heavy field. Here the ponderous navy team, outweighing the army twelve pounds on the individual hoof can make use of its superior weight. A sustained rain would just about level everything, including the fact that West Point has Wilson, all American half-back, Wood, Gilmore and Hewitt, a much better running attack than navy can hope to muster.

The only factor that bad weather conditions cannot affect is the superior punting of Wood who figured to outkick any man the navy nominated. But this advantage did not figure to be great in any case, owing to the fact that the navy ends were expected to cover punts better than their army opponents, who with the tackles were the only weak links in the army chain.

Duly apprised of this fact, Navy's strategy would seem to call for a running attack off tackle, but it is understood that such will be far from the case. The tip is that the Navy will play a passing game as long as the weather justified this maneuvre. The probable lineup:

Army	Position	Navy

ROCKNE ELEVEN IN PITTSBURGH

Carnegie Tech to Close Season With Notre Dame.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 29—The football season will end here this afternoon when Carnegie Tech meets the unbeaten Notre Dame team before what will be, it is predicted, the largest crowd ever assembled at Forbes Field. Every seat has been sold and demands for seats were still being received by the Tech Athletic officials this morning.

It was snowing here early today, and when the whistle blows at 2 o'clock this afternoon Tech and the Irish will start the game on a snow covered field with a strong Southwest wind blowing, according to the local weather man.

Elmer Layden, Notre Dame's star full back, will not be in the game this afternoon, declared Coach Rockne, on account of a sprained ligament after the Northwestern game last week. Cerney, one of Rockne's second string backs will take the field along with the other "Horsemen."

Tech is in perfect condition, according to their Coach, and it is said that those who do not concede the "Skibos" even a fighting chance are likely to be surprised.

By the count of 39 to 31, the Laughlin No. 6 passers of the "Y" industrial league triumphed over the Potters Co-Operatives last night at the Y. M. C. C. gym, with Forward Webb and his nine field goals figuring very much in the victory.

The failure of the Potters to stop Webb was the cause of their downfall, although the victors, as a general rule played basketball of high quality, and judging by the score, quantity, as well Jester and Duffy also was in the game for the winners, contributing 18 points to the total, while Harker and McGuiness put up good guard games.

Wallace and Hamilton were the sterling performers for the Potters, scoring all but six of the team's 31 points.

Army Squad Slight Favorite Although Mud Favors Middies

By Davis J. Walsh:

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—Just as the assassin's bullet at Sarajevo was the shot that was heard around the world, the shrill, staccato music of a referee's whistle, sounded at the hour of two this afternoon will send its message to the nethermost outposts of the known universe.

Out along the air currents of the ocean it will go and army officers in a lonely post in the Philippines will share its secret with those patrolling the deck of a navy cruiser in the North Sea. They will know that the annual Army and Navy football game, their big moment of a drab, serene year of peace has started with its usual rush of desperate play and colorful incident.

It was to be the first time the locale had been laid south of the Mason and Dixon line since 1893 and a goodly crowd was there. Some of our best people, including President and Mrs. Coolidge, members of the cabinet, admirals, generals and what not, were to be among those present. Also some of our worst, including ticket speculators, gentlemen bootleggers, and the usual human flotsam that follows an event of this kind.

The local stadium has an estimated capacity of 80,000 and, rain or shine, every seat will have its occupant when the referee plays the tune so alluring to the ear of far-off service men, whom duty claims over desire. The official forecast was for a clear day, although early indications carried a threat of rain. A storm last night left the field slightly heavy, a Navy advantage.

Webb Scoring Ace As No. 6 Five Downs Potters, 39-31

By the count of 39 to 31, the Laughlin No. 6 passers of the "Y" industrial league triumphed over the Potters Co-Operatives last night at the Y. M. C. C. gym, with Forward Webb and his nine field goals figuring very much in the victory.

The failure of the Potters to stop Webb was the cause of their downfall, although the victors, as a general rule played basketball of high quality, and judging by the score, quantity, as well Jester and Duffy also was in the game for the winners, contributing 18 points to the total, while Harker and McGuiness put up good guard games.

Wallace and Hamilton were the sterling performers for the Potters, scoring all but six of the team's 31 points.

The Laughlins led by the score of 8 to 5 at the end of the opening period and was on top with the count of 17 to 11 at the end of the half. They maintained their position during the third and final cantos.

The lineup:

Laughlin No. 6		Potters
Duffy	F.	Hamilton
Webb	F.	Wallace
Jester	C.	Guyton
Harker	G.	Zook
McGuiness	G.	Bricelin

Substitutions—Wallace for Bricelin, Bricelin for Guyton, Bricelin for Waller, Wallace for Bricelin, Johnson for Wallace, Guyton for Wallace, Wallace for Johnson.

Field goals—Webb 9, Jester 4, Duffy 2, Wallace 5, Hamilton 4, Guyton.

Foul goals—Duffy 3, Jester 3, Webb McGuiness, Harker, Wallace 5, Bricelin 4, Hamilton 2. Referee, Davis.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E BROWN

With the recent passage of the new boxing law in California followers of the fistic game in the Pacific Coast state in particular and all over the country generally look for a big revival of the sport in that state.

The new law, just passed, permits 10 round bouts to decision and 12-round no-decision battles.

For years the game there had been restricted to four-round bouts between amateurs. Of course, the promoters were allowed a little leeway. For instance Jack Dempsey was considered an amateur. So were Willie Ritchie and several others who have fought one or two professional bouts for small purses but then—

As we were saying the game had been held down. The years since the "big days" back around 1900 and ten years each way, had been lean ones to boxing fans.

The older fellows recall memorable bouts of varying distances that featured Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries, Joe Choynski, Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsommons, Bat Nelson, Abe Attell, Jimmie Britt, Ad Wolgast, Packey McFarland, Freddy Welsh, Johnny Coulon, Johnny Kilbane and others.

Many of these champions and favorites lived in or around California. The others won their fame there.

Now, under the new regulations, fans are hopeful of seeing more real battles and also of watching a new crop of fighters raised that will draw the spotlight to the coast.

However, we have seen the boxing game abused and killed in so many states and localities where earnest effort has been spent to revive it that we cannot become optimistic over the revival in California.

If the men in power and influence in that state want the game to flourish they must take steps immediately to check the flim-lamming, petty scheming, and high handed methods of promoters and managers.

The rank and file of these men can't see beyond their noses. If given free rein they will disgust the public with the new condition in a very few months. Then will come another agitation to smother the sport—and how they will howl.

Three drastic measures must be taken to—

Prohibit "setup" bouts.

Bar "has beens" who are simply trying to live on their names.

Eliminate all fighters and promoters who participate in queer or "song and dance" battles.

Speaking of Rockne recalls the disappointing season another great coach is experiencing while the Notre Dame team rides the high waves of success. That man is Gil Dobie, the man who conquered the Pacific coast with his Washington team nad then moved east to new worlds.

Last year, with George Pfann as the mainspring, Dobie had a great team at Cornell, where he has acted as coach since leaving the Navy campus. This year, however, has found Cornell with but a medicore team. Rutger and Williams handed the Ithaca team drubbings. Columbia might have scored a victory had the team put its heart in the game. The pupils of the late Percy Haughton went into the game saddened by the death of the great football teacher.

Another British ring hope has gone home to join the list of disappointments.

Last summer little Frankie Ash, ranked as a coming flyweight hero of the British Isles—the man to take Jimmy Wilde's place—came to America to try his skill and speed against the little fellows in this country.

The other day he sailed for the British Isles.

Ash seemed destined to reach the height last summer when he met Pancho Villa, world's flyweight king, in a title bout in the east. He gave the little Filipino a royal battle.

Apparently he had reached the peak of his career then, however, for his following bouts failed to impress critics. In his last appearance he took on Al Brown, a New York negro flyweight, and was knocked cold in the first round. Brown had drawn little notice before teh bout.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

BY NORMAN E BROWN

With the recent passage of the new boxing law in California followers of the fistic game in the Pacific Coast state in particular and all over the country generally look for a big revival of the sport in that state.

The new law, just passed, permits 10 round bouts to decision and 12-round no-decision battles.

For years the game there had been restricted to four-round bouts between amateurs. Of course, the promoters were allowed a little leeway. For instance Jack Dempsey was considered an amateur. So were Willie Ritchie and several others who have fought one or two professional bouts for small purses but then—

As we were saying the game had been held down. The years since the "big days" back around 1900 and ten years each way, had been lean ones to boxing fans.

The older fellows recall memorable bouts of varying distances that featured Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries, Joe Choynski, Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsommons, Bat Nelson, Abe Attell, Jimmie Britt, Ad Wolgast, Packey McFarland, Freddy Welsh, Johnny Coulon, Johnny Kilbane and others.

Many of these champions and favorites lived in or around California. The others won their fame there.

Now, under the new regulations, fans are hopeful of seeing more real battles and also of watching a new crop of fighters raised that will draw the spotlight to the coast.

However, we have seen the boxing game abused and killed in so many states and localities where earnest effort has been spent to revive it that we cannot become optimistic over the revival in California.

If the men in power and influence in that state want the game to flourish they must take steps immediately to check the flim-lamming, petty scheming, and high handed methods of promoters and managers.

The rank and file of these men can't see beyond their noses. If given free rein they will disgust the public with the new condition in a very few months. Then will come another agitation to smother the sport—and how they will howl.

Three drastic measures must be taken to—

Prohibit "setup" bouts.

Bar "has beens" who are simply trying to live on their names.

Eliminate all fighters and promoters who participate in queer or "song and dance" battles.

Speaking of Rockne recalls the disappointing season another great coach is experiencing while the Notre Dame team rides the high waves of success. That man is Gil Dobie, the man who conquered the Pacific coast with his Washington team nad then moved east to new worlds.

Last year, with George Pfann as the mainspring, Dobie had a great team at Cornell, where he has acted as coach since leaving the Navy campus. This year, however, has found Cornell with but a medicore team. Rutger and Williams handed the Ithaca team drubbings. Columbia might have scored a victory had the team put its heart in the game. The pupils of the late Percy Haughton went into the game saddened by the death of the great football teacher.

Another British ring hope has gone home to join the list of disappointments.

Last summer little Frankie Ash, ranked as a coming flyweight hero of the British Isles—the man to take Jimmy Wilde's place—came to America to try his skill and speed against the little fellows in this country.

The other day he sailed for the British Isles.

Ash seemed destined to reach the height last summer when he met Pancho Villa, world's flyweight king, in a title bout in the east. He gave the little Filipino a royal battle.

Apparently he had reached the peak of his career then, however, for his following bouts failed to impress critics. In his last appearance he took on Al Brown, a New York negro flyweight, and was knocked cold in the first round. Brown had drawn little notice before teh bout.

SPORTS DONE BROWN
BY NORMAN E BROWN

With the recent passage of the new boxing law in California followers of the fistic game in the Pacific Coast state in particular and all over the country generally look for a big revival of the sport in that state.

The new law, just passed, permits 10 round bouts to decision and 12-round no-decision battles.

For years the game there had been restricted to four-round bouts between amateurs. Of course, the promoters were allowed a little leeway. For instance Jack Dempsey was considered an amateur. So were Willie Ritchie and several others who have fought one or two professional bouts for small purses but then—

As we were saying the game had been held down. The years since the "big days" back around 1900 and ten years each way, had been lean ones to boxing fans.

The older fellows recall memorable bouts of varying distances that featured Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries, Joe Choynski, Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsommons, Bat Nelson, Abe Attell, Jimmie Britt, Ad Wolgast, Packey McFarland, Freddy Welsh, Johnny Coulon, Johnny Kilbane and others.

Many of these champions and favorites lived in or around California. The others won their fame there.

Now, under the new regulations, fans are hopeful of seeing more real battles and also of watching a new crop of fighters raised that will draw the spotlight to the coast.

However, we have seen the boxing game abused and killed in so many states and localities where earnest effort has been spent to revive it that we cannot become optimistic over the revival in California.

If the men in power and influence in that state want the game to flourish they must take steps immediately to check the flim-lamming, petty scheming, and high handed methods of promoters and managers.

The rank and file of these men can't see beyond their noses. If given free rein they will disgust the public with the new condition in a very few months. Then will come another agitation to smother the sport—and how they will howl.

Three drastic measures must be taken to—

Prohibit "setup" bouts.

Bar "has beens" who are simply rying to live on their names.

Eliminate all fighters and promoters who participate in queer or "song and dance" battles.

Speaking of Rockne recalls the disappointing season another great coach is experiencing while the Notre Dame team rides the high waves of success. That man is Gil Dobie, the man who conquered the Pacific coast with his Washington team nad then moved east to new worlds.

Last year, with George Pfann as the mainspring, Dobie had a great team at Cornell, where he has acted as coach since leaving the Navy campus. This year, however, has found Cornell with but a medicore team. Rutger and Williams handed the Ithaca team drubbings. Columbia might have scored a victory had the team put its heart in the game. The pupils of the late Percy Haughton went into the game saddened by the death of the great football teacher.

Another British ring hope has gone home to join the list of disappointments.

Last summer little Frankie Ash, ranked as a coming flyweight hero of the British Isles—the man to take Jimmy Wilde's place—came to America to try his skill and speed against the little fellows in this country.

The other day he sailed for the British Isles.

Ash seemed destined to reach the height last summer when he met Pancho Villa, world's flyweight king, in a title bout in the east. He gave the little Filipino a royal battle.

Apparently he had reached the peak of his career then, however, for his following bouts failed to impress critics. In his last appearance he took on Al Brown, a New York negro flyweight, and was knocked cold in the first round. Brown had drawn little notice before teh bout.

VENUS DE MILO ALWAYS ARMLESS, DECLARES NOTED FRENCH SAVANT

PARIS — Venus de Milo never had any arms, declares Dr. Edde in "L'Illustration," in response to numbers of questions which are continually being asked in regard to the famous state in the Louvre.

"This statue," he goes on to say, "was not always buried in ancient ruins. For many years it was exposed in a great temple and admired and worshipped by the entire Hellenic world. Artists reproduced it and copies of the lovely Venus were spread throughout the universe."

Dr. Edde himself possesses a beautiful small Venus in bronze, made by a poor Egyptian artist. It is undoubtedly of the same epoch as the Venus of the Louvre and it has no arms. This is almost positive proof, according to the connoisseur that the real Aphrodite never had any at all.

Of course the next question is why didn't she have them? And here the question becomes more difficult. Perhaps the artist intended to add them, but, seeing his half-finished work so beautiful feared to add anything that might take away from its beauty. Then again, it may have been that the sculptor died suddenly without being able to finish his work.

At the time when the statue was found in the island which gave it its name the arms were long-searched for and even a large sum was promised to the person who could find them. In spite of all the efforts the arms were never found, for it is very likely there never were any.

Male Mannequin Makes His Debut in London; Parades at Ease

LONDON, Nov.—The male mannequin has made his debut here.

With women mannequins, he showed off the latest fashions in men's wear at a dress show here recently.

Spectators declared that he performed his duties much more effectively than mannequins of the opposite sex do. He not only knew the name of the material of which his suit was made, but also all about its cut, fit and wearing qualities.

Contrary to the women's mannerisms, he had not acquired a special walk nor the deliberate mannequin stare, but paraded quite at his ease.

VENUS DE MILO ALWAYS ARMLESS, DECLARES NOTED FRENCH SAVANT

PARIS — Venus de Milo never had any arms, declares Dr. Edde in "L'Illustration," in response to numbers of questions which are continually being asked in regard to the famous state in the Louvre.

"This statue," he goes on to say, "was not always buried in ancient ruins. For many years it was exposed in a great temple and admired and worshipped by the entire Hellenic world. Artists reproduced it and copies of the lovely Venus were spread throughout the universe."

Dr. Edde himself possesses a beautiful small Venus in bronze, made by a poor Egyptian artist. It is undoubtedly of the same epoch as the Venus of the Louvre and it has no arms. This is almost positive proof, according to the connoisseur that the real Aphrodite never had any at all.

Of course the next question is why didn't she have them? And here the question becomes more difficult. Perhaps the artist intended to add them, but, seeing his half-finished work so beautiful feared to add anything that might take away from its beauty. Then again, it may have been that the sculptor died suddenly without being able to finish his work.

At the time when the statue was found in the island which gave it its name the arms were long-searched for and even a large sum was promised to the person who could find them. In spite of all the efforts the arms were never found, for it is very likely there never were any.

ABILENA, Texas.—With his back labeled "Student," C. A. Wood, 18, hiked from Fort Worth to Abilena, a distance of 170 miles, to enter McMurry college.

Though he was given numerous lifts by motorists who saw the sign, the trip required seven days. "I wanted to save the railroad fare to apply to my tuition," said Wood. "I need all the money I can get."

Male Mannequin Makes His Debut in London; Parades at Ease

LONDON, Nov.—The male mannequin has made his debut here.

With women mannequins, he showed off the latest fashions in men's wear at a dress show here recently.

Spectators declared that he performed his duties much more effectively than mannequins of the opposite sex do. He not only knew the name of the material of which his suit was made, but also all about its cut, fit and wearing qualities.

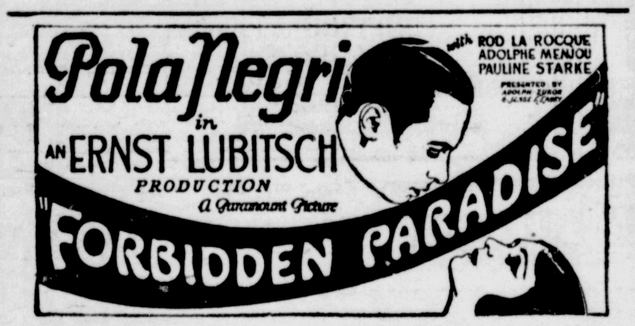

Contrary to the women's mannerisms, he had not acquired a special walk nor the deliberate mannequin stare, but paraded quite at his ease.
